THE FRENCH ASSEMBLY.

An Effort to Impeach the Provisional Government of Defense—The Question of Removal from Bordeaux—Opposition to Paris—A Convention with the Germans.

BORDEAUX, March 6—Evening.—In the National Assembly this evening MM. LOUIS BLANC, VICTOR HUGO and QUINNET made a demand for the detention of the members of the September Government until they shall have returned an account of their acts until the capitulation of Paris.

M. DELESCLUZE submitted a demand for their impeachment and arrest on the charge of high treason.

A motion was made that the Assembly should not return to Paris, but sit elsewhere.

At the request of M. THIERS, the Assembly immediately went into committee upon the question, a decision upon which is to be made to-morrow.

BORDEAUX, March 7.—The Assembly is in session, awaiting the report of the Committee on its removal from Bordeaux.

LONDON, March 7.—The Daily News of today says a special convention has been entered into by the German and French authorities, under which the German occupation of Versailles is extended until the 24th of March.

THE ARMY OF FRANCE.

Disbanding of the Twenty-Third Corps—Address of Faidherbe—Faidherbe in Command of the Paris National Guards—The Prisoners in Switzerland.

LILLE, March 7.—Gen. FAIDHERBE issued a proclamation to the Twenty-third Corps, composed of National Guards, on their disbandment. He thanked them for the manner in which they have fulfilled the hard duties imposed by the Government of National Defense, and tells them that they now return to their homes, honored by their compatriots, and that they have in themselves the elements of a superior army. He concludes by denouncing those who shirked their duty to their country, declaring that public opinion will punish them with eternal infamy.

PARIS, March 7.—Gen. AURELLES DE PALLADINES has assumed command of the National Guard of Paris. In his first order of the day he invokes the co-operation of the men in the work of maintaining order, and declares that tranquillity alone will restore the prosperity of France. Meanwhile all disturbances will be promptly repressed and their promoters sternly dealt with.

The Press approve of the General's order, and say affairs already show improvement.

BERNE, Switzerland, March 7.—The return of the French soldiers interned in Switzerland has been postponed at the request of the French Government, in consequence of the interruption of the Lyons and Paris Railway.

GREAT BRITAIN.

Mr. Gladstone on the Russo-Prussian Secret Treaty—Changes in the British Cabinet—The Work of the Joint High Commission—Strike at Newcastle.

LONDON, March 7.—In the House of Commons, to-night, Mr. GLADSTONE, replying to the question of which Mr. DISRAELI gave notice last night, denied that the Government had any knowledge of a secret treaty between the Czar and Prussia. He also intimated that the Conference on the Euxine question would not adjourn for some time to come.

The House agreed to the appointment of a Committee on reform in the Patent Laws.

The Times of today announces the following changes in the Ministry:

Right Hon. GEORGE J. GOSCHEN succeeds Right Hon. HUGH C. E. CHILDERS as First Lord of the Admiralty.

Right Hon. JAMES STANSFELD succeeds Mr. GOSCHEN as President of the Poor Law Board.

GEORGE J. SHAW-LEFEVRE, at present Secretary of the Board of Trade, succeeds Mr. BAXTER as Secretary to the Admiralty.

Mr. GOSCHEN'S acceptance of the office of First Lord of the Admiralty was announced in the House of Commons to-night.

The Morning Post learns that the prospect of the settlement of all matters of dispute between the United States and England, by the High Commission at Washington, is very promising. There is, says the Post, an evident disposition to treat all topics with fairness. Discussions will first take place upon the question of the fisheries, and afterward upon the subject of the Alabama claims.

A thousand workmen have struck at Newcastle, because the masters refuse to pay them weekly instead of fortnightly.

GENERAL EUROPEAN NEWS.

Wandering of a Ship at Sea—Seventeen Lives Lost—Italy and Tunis—A Papal Allocution—His Exhorts the Italian Guarantees and Expresses His Gratitude to the Catholic World for its Benevolence.

LONDON, March 7.—The ship Mistress of the Seas has foundered at sea. Seventeen lives were lost.

The London Telegraph has a special dispatch from Florence, announcing the settlement of the difficulty between the Governments of Italy and Tunis. The demands of Italy were fully conceded, and the conditions imposed by the Florence Government accepted by Tunis.

ROME, March 7.—The Pope has held a secret consistory, in which he delivered an allocution of considerable length. The Holy Father, in his address to the Cardinals, attacks the motives and acts of the authors of the recent Italian events, and particularly the occupation of Rome; and rejects the guarantees of his spiritual power proposed by the bill which recently passed the Italian Parliament. He also laments the occurrence of the Franco-Prussian war, and expresses his gratitude for the devotion to himself and the Church of the whole Catholic world.

BOUND FOR PARIS.

The Means for the Capital—The First Train—Passengers' Sentiments—Inside the City—Fleet and Fresher—The Food Supply—First Closed Letters.

From Our Own Correspondent.

PARIS, Friday, Feb. 17, 1871.

Enfin! In Paris at last! WHY the Germans should have placed so many obstacles in the way of getting to Paris during the armistice I do not see, though if the war went on strangers might be troublesome. On Tuesday I was in Liverpool. On Wednesday, in London, driving down-town to show a newly-arrived American lady the great metropolis, I called at the American Embassy to ask Mr. MORAN if it was possible to get to Paris. The American Embassy in London is close under the shadow of Westminster Abbey and the towers of the Houses of Parliament. If Gen. SCHENCK wishes to beard the lion in his den, he could not have a better place to do it. The office of the Embassy is on the ground floor of No. 5 Westminster Chambers, Victoria-street, straight before you as you enter, without even a bell to pull or a latch-string. Push, and there you are, with Mr. MORAN sitting behind a table, ready to do you any service in his power.

"Can I go to [Paris now?" I inquired, for I had asked the question before.

"Very sorry, but I have a messenger engaged for to-morrow; however, I will do the best I can for you. Sit down a moment and I will give you a line to Count ALFRED DE BERNSTORFF. It is a name of power." I took Mr. MORAN'S elegant note with thanks and drove to Prussia House, No. 9 Carleton-place, close to the residence of the Prime Minister. A wonderfully-powdered footman taken the note; I walk in and a tall blond gentleman, who speaks English without the slightest German accent, writes some cabalistic lines on the back of my passport, for which I thank him and retire. No, that was not all. He asked my business in Paris, and I very frankly told him the truth, for nine times in ten the simple truth is better than the most injurious lie that can be invented.

EN ROUTE.

Then I drove to Charing Cross, after showing my fair American the wonders of Westminster—just a glimpse of them—to see what time the train for Folkstone and Boulogne left. And it left in half an hour—the only one for twenty-four hours, and I had no luggage but my umbrella. So I sent my lady home alone in a Hansom, took the train with a quantity of refugees trying to return to Paris, and crossing the Channel, smooth as a mill-pond, at 9 P. M. was in Boulogne, when I went to my favorite hotel, now quite desolate from the long-suspended traffic, and was soon sound asleep. No noise in Boulogne now; no singing of the "Marseillaise." Rising at 7, I rushed to the railway station to inquire about a train for Paris. There was a train at 9 o'clock, but to get a ticket I must go to the Prefecture of Police, thence to the Mairie, thence to the American Consul, acting for Prussia, and if all these gentlemen were agreeable I could get a ticket to Paris. And all this before 9 o'clock! They are early risers in France, compared with the English, but this was impossible.

THE FIRST TRAIN.

So I got my breakfast, and a few minutes before 9 went over to the station just to see the crowd applying for tickets. It was worth seeing. Exiles from Paris for weary months filled the great hall of the station; and as I stood there it suddenly occurred to me that it would be no harm to try for a ticket. They could only refuse me, and I could pay my respects to red tape afterward. So I fell into the line, advancing very slowly to the ticket window. By it stood an officer, sharp and clear enough, handsome and good natured, who examined every one's papers, and decided upon his eligibility for Paris. My turn came, and I handed out my passport. His eye fell upon the German inscription, and the signature "Count BERNSTORFF." Said he: "I know his signature very well. First-class for Paris." I paid the fare, hurried to the train and found myself seated beside a young lady so beautiful and gracious that I at once took her for an American. But her father, who sat opposite her, was evidently an English clergyman. They were returning to their home in the neighborhood of Paris. The train was nine hours, instead of five in reaching Paris. At Creil, where a bridge had been blown up, we had to alight and cross the Marne on a bridge of boats and get into a train on the other side.

PASSENGERS SENTIMENTS.

A little north of Amiens we saw the Prussians. At Amiens plenty. The soldiers at the stations were very neat, with their new uniforms—the officers swaggering as if they owned the country. The lovely lady at my side, English as she was, would gladly have seen them all at the bottom of the sea. She had lived in France for many years, and was so strong in her sympathies that I counseled her to a little prudent moderation. The French passengers and all the French I have seen, seem to have given up all hope of effective resistance, and to wish only for peace. In Paris, they say, "we defended ourselves as long as we had bread. The bombardment did not by one hour hasten the capitulation." Everywhere in the North the word is peace. There is no hope of successful resistance. And the wonderful power and discipline of the Germans makes them admired and respected as much, almost, as they are detested for their cruelties and robberies.

THE SUBURBS.

You should see the condition of the suburbs of Paris, even so much as we could see from the Northern Railroad. St. Denis is half destroyed. The beautiful villas along the road are utterly wrecked, and look like a London house twenty years in Chancery, with every window broken. Many are burnt. Alas for the poor exiles who come back to find their homes—bare walls at best, in many cases but ashes. Near the enceinte the train stopped, and a Prussian officer examined the papers of every passenger. He was a handsome young nobleman, born to command. Power was in every tone of his voice and every motion of his body. It was the concentration of imperiousness and hauteur. He took my passport, read aloud a line of the German indorsement in a tone of lofty vexation, the name of Count BERNSTORFF, then glanced at the indorsement of Mr. WASHBURNE, who has won such golden opinions in Paris, and handed it back to me with a proud civility. It was clear enough that I could go where I liked. It was not a laisser passer, nor a pas d'conduit, but it answered every purpose.

INSIDE THE CITY.

In a few moments we were at the Gare du Nord. Not a glimmer of gas. Not a cab. The place was desolate. I hastened into the streets. They were as dark as those of a country village. The lamps burnt dimly; the few shops open were badly lighted. I found an omnibus, and made my way to my accustomed hotel in the Rue de Rivoli.

Paris is so brilliant lighted with gas, and now it was all like a funeral. No carriages, little traffic, only lamps and candles. It is going back to the dark ages.

PAST AND PRESENT.

My landlady of the Hotel Ste. Marie, shook me heartily by the hand, and looked as if she would have liked to kiss me, to which I should not have made the least objection—under the circumstances. I had seen her last at the end of August. She had not seen her children for more than five months, and had scarcely heard from them. She had been obliged to live upon horseflesh, and for a time upon bread, the worst that can be imagined. Her beautiful restaurant had been shut up for want of food. The house had been full of wounded soldiers. Mobiles came in meekly and quietly and took their keys from the office. I got, however, a nice room and bed, and from my window on the Rue de Rivoli I expect to see the whole German Army march through Paris. Many fear a terrible outbreak and a more terrible vengeance. Quantities of small shells have been found—but these were prepared to defend Paris against an assault. There will be no resistance. The French know that they have been beaten. They give it up—I believe the feeling is almost universal—and the Germans will march through Paris and not a word will be said against them. It may be insulting, but it is no much better than they have done in other places, that Paris will quietly submit to it. Paris has paid 200,000,000 francs within a few days, for heating the oker. Paris will not be foolish after that.

THE FOOD SUPPLY.

There is scarcity in Paris, but no longer famine. There are eggs, butter, cheese, apples, oranges, salt fish, pork, beef, mutton. Scarcely any milk yet, but every day increases the supplies.

CLOSED LETTERS PERMITTED.

I write hastily in hopes of catching the Saturday's steamer. This is the first day closed letters have gone direct from Paris. In my next I shall give many more particulars. MONADNOCK.

FRANCE.

Payment of the Paris War Indemnity.

Paris (Feb. 18) Correspondence London Daily News.

The war indemnity exacted of the City of Paris, amounting to 200,000,000 francs, ($38,000,000 sterling,) is in course of liquidation. Last Monday the sum total was conveyed to Versailles, according to agreement. It was composed of drafts upon Berlin to the amount of one-half, and the other half of notes of the Bank of France, inclosed in two iron chests. The Prussian receivers wanted to check the amount, notwithstanding that the chests had been sealed, to which their attention was directed, as a guarantee of the integrity of the contents. In return a sum of 50,000,000 of francs in notes was handed over to the French Commissioners, to be exchanged—still according to the Convention—against 30,000,000 in gold and 20,000,000 in silver. The Commissioners instituted upon the verification of the 50,000,000 returned into their hands. On Tuesday the Bank of France remitted 7,000,000 in silver. The Prussian agents proceeded to count out the amount; but perceiving the operation would require too much time, (at the rate of 5,000 in a minute a man would need his entire twelve hours to perform this arithmetic,) they contented themselves with weighing the coin. On Wednesday last, 7,000,000 more were handed over to them, which the Prussian controllers were condescending enough to take upon trust. On Thursday, the balance of 6,000,000 was paid, and today the 30,000,000 (francs always) in gold will pass into their hands. This enormous sum has been drawn by the Bank of France from its branch at Brest.

"Valentine Against Gambetta."

In the Equity Courts of London, before Vice Chancellor Sir R. MALINS, in the case of VALENTINE versus GAMBETTA, an interim injunction had been granted on behalf of the plaintiff, who was a merchant in the City of London, to restrain the bankers, Messrs. MORGAN & GOOCH, from parting with a sum of 5,000,000 francs which had been deposited with them for payment of a contract entered into by M. GAMBETTA with the plaintiff, for the supply of twenty batteries of guns, and which contract the defendant sought to repudiate. It was then stated that the money so deposited amounted to 6,000,000 francs, but that 5,000,000 francs had been sent over to New-York, where the contract was to be carried out, and from whence the guns were to be shipped. Mr. GLASSE (with whom was Mr. PEMBERTON,) stated that it had been discovered that the whole sum of 6,000,000 francs was still lodged with Messrs. MORGAN and GOOCH, and no part of it had been sent to New-York. He therefore asked that the injunction might be extended to the full amount. The Vice-Chancellor made the order asked.

ENGLAND.

Introducing the Ballot.

In the House of Commons, on Feb. 20, Mr W. E. FORSTER brought in the Government bill for the better regulation of Parliamentary and municipal elections. The ballot is to be used both at municipal and Parliamentary elections—the first being often, in corrupt constituencies, merely a stepping-stone to the second. The bill is to a great extent a copy of that which was brought in last year by the Marquis of HARTINGTON. But there are a few important changes. The system of counterfoils is abandoned. Voting-papers will not be given to a voter before he enters the booth; and no paper which does not bear the official stamp will be counted. The voter will not be allowed to put any mark on the voting paper beyond what is sufficient to show for whom he votes. Candidates will not be allowed to open committee-rooms at public houses; and Mr. FORSTER observed, amid the cheers of the House, that the Government would have been glad to have gone a step further, and closed all public houses on the day of election. The present system of nominations and declarations of the poll will be done away with. Another proposed change of great importance is that the expenses of the returning officers shall be borne by the constituency. This concession will, Mr. FORSTER believes, be regarded as a great boon by "working men candidates." In conclusion, he appealed to the Conservatives to discuss the bill apart from all considerations of party. Mr. E. A. LEATHAM thanked Mr. FORSTER for the "completeness of the measure, which was read a first time, after Mr. G. BENTINCK had denounced it from the country squire's point of view. The House shortly afterward rose.

ENGLAND AND ROME.

Attitude of the British Government in Relation to the Rights of the Pope.

In the House of Commons, on Feb. 21, Mr. W. JOHNSTON, seconded by Mr. MILLER, moved for the production of the well-known correspondence between Mr. GLADSTONE and Mr. D'AZEG, and Mr. KINNAIRD in reference to the Pope; also for copies of the dispatches to foreign Governments, to the Governors of Malta and Gibraltar, and from the English diplomatic agent at Rome on the same subject. Mr. GLADSTONE said: "I am sorry the honorable member for Belfast had framed his motion in such a manner as makes it impossible for the Government to agree to it as it stands. But before dealing with it I will state the position the Government assumes with regard to the question. The Government do not, as the honorable member has stated, wish to have the spiritual functions of the Pope, recognized or meddled with by us in any way; but the Government believes that the liberty of the head of the religion of many millions of our fellow-subjects—his liberty and personal independence—is a legitimate matter for the notice of this Government. That is the proposition we maintain, and that we mean to adhere to: if the honorable member thinks that a proposition dangerous to the principle of the Reformation, all I can say is that the principles of the Reformation must be more comprehensive than most Protestants commonly believe them to be. If my language, through its looseness, has scandalized the conscience of the honorable gentleman or any other honorable member, I could wish to remove their difficulty." Mr. GLADSTONE then offered to give the dispatches to the Governors of Malta and Gibraltar, in which will be found stated the view of the Government, viz., that, though the Pope's spiritual functions were not recognized by them, his legitimate independence and liberty to exercise them were a matter of interest to Government. There was no precedent for producing private letters from the Prime Minister to a member of Parliament; and as to the letters from Rome, a Blue Book of Italian correspondence would be printed in a day or two. Mr. GREENE wished to know how far the legitimate independence of the Pope is to be carried; and Mr. NEWDEGATE maintained that Mr. GLADSTONE had violated the statute by entering into relations with the Pope in his spiritual functions. Mr. GREGORY suggested that the discussion should be postponed until Friday, when the whole subject of Roman affairs would be raised. SIR J. PAKINGTON could see no reason for refusing the Prime Minister, and Mr. GLADSTONE, in order to get the latter on the immediately offered to answer a formal inquiry whether it was a genuine document. This Mr. JOHNSTON refused, and, going to a division, was beaten by 159 to 90.

HAVANA, March 7, via LAKE CITY, March 7.—Rumors are current that a heavy engagement has taken place at Las Tunas. The insurgents had two pieces of artillery, and were commanded by VINCENTE GARCIA. It is reported that the Spanish troops were victorious.

KINGSTON, March 7.—Now grappling-gear has been arranged. Sir CHARLES BRIGHT, with the two cable steamers, is expected to-morrow. The Dacia goes to St. Thomas to lay cables down between the islands. The Suffolk will grapple the lost cables and lay the shore ends.....The Colonial Secretary at Jamaica has gone to New-York on a secret commission, supposed to be in connection with the San Domingo affair.

PORTO RICO, March 2.—The elections resulted in favor of the Radical candidates for Deputies to the Cortes, the Conservative element generally abstaining from voting.

WINNIPEG.

TORONTO, Ontario, March 7.—Advices received from Winnipeg the 18th of February, state that a good deal of dissatisfaction exists among the volunteers, owing to the alleged favoritism of different battalions. A volunteer who had been ordered under arrest, supported by his comrades, fired his rifle at and severely wounded the corporal of the guard. A revival of the difficulties in the North-west are possible. The meeting of the Provincial Legislature has been delayed until after the election of the Dominion Representatives. The members will endeavor to postpone the sitting until the present excitement has subsided. Lieut. BARTON, who has returned from Rocky Mountain House, reports great ravages by small-pox on the Plains and in the Mission.

THE SOUTH.

Campaign Against Illicit Distilleries in Tennessee—Encounter with Bushwhackers—Supposed Suicide in New-Orleans—The Mississippi Legislature Neglecting to Provide for a State Election.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., March 7.—Assistant Supervisor R. T. GAINES, accompanied by Deputy United States Marshal A. H. OTTARSON and a squad of Federal soldiers, left here Feb. 27, for a raid on illicit distilleries. In the Third District they have succeeded in breaking up twelve distilleries, and destroying 50,000 gallons of beer at Shellmount. In Smith County, the party was fired upon by bushwhackers, but no one hurt. District Supervisor GAINES was shot in the thigh by the accidental discharge of his pistol, and brought home today. The wound is severe, but not dangerous. The remainder of the party is still in search of contraband distilleries.

NEW-ORLEANS, March 7.—Capt. F. W. PERKINS, a well-known steam-ship agent, was found dead in his office, No. 26 Carondelet-street, this morning, having been shot through the head. There were also other evidences of violence. An inquest is being held. The impression prevails here that Capt. PERKINS committed suicide.

JACKSON, Miss., March 7.—The Legislature has been trying to evade the enactment of laws preparatory to holding an election this Fall. Yesterday Gov. ALCORN informed a committee that he would order an election for all offices to be filled under the Constitution, whether they enacted the laws or not. He also informed the Committee that he would not occupy his Senatorial chair until the election would be held in November.

Observations on Mount Washington.

SUMMIT OF MOUNT WASHINGTON, March 7.—Observations at 7 P. M. Barometer, 22.32; change, plus .32; thermometer, 10°; no change; relative humidity, .82; wind west; velocity of wind, eight miles per hour. It has been one of those bright days such as we have only at this high altitude. At sunrise the clouds eastward were one blaze of golden light, while westward far up above the horizon, the shadows of Mount Washington could be distinctly traced; as the sun rose higher, the surface of the clouds were of silvery whiteness, with dark chasms in the eddying mist. Now the full orbed moon shines through a pure and stainless atmosphere.

CHICAGO, March 7.—At Nauvoo, Ill., a short time since, a lad named LOGAN broke away from a school-mistress while she was punishing him, and was captured and brought back by another lad named YATES. This so enraged an elder brother of LOGAN'S that on Friday last, when the two met at school, LOGAN attacked YATES with a knife, and stabbed him so severely that he died in a few hours. LOGAN fled and has not yet been arrested.

WASHINGTON.

No Adjournment at Congress this Week—Shall the House Committees be Appointed?—Bills Introduced in the Senate—Satisfactory Exhibit of the Appropriations—The British Commissioners Sit for their Photographs—Tammany Tactics.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—Mr. HAMLIN announced today in the Senate, from the Committee appointed on Saturday to communicate the organization of Congress to the President, that he had informed them he had no message to submit at present, that he probably should have next week, and that he requested no day of final adjournment should be fixed this week. Of course this settled the fate of the House resolution to adjourn to-morrow, and on motion of Mr. HAMLIN it was laid on the table with only Democratic voices heard in dissent. After a session of little more than an hour the Senate adjourned till Thursday. The House also adjourned until Thursday.

QUESTION OF APPOINTING THE HOUSE COMMITTEES.

Mr. HISLACK offered a resolution declaring it to be the sense of the House that the Committees be appointed. Mr. WHEELER moved to lay it on the table, which was carried by an almost unanimous vote. The Speaker expressed much gratification at this result, as it relieved him from all embarrassment upon the subject, and would give him time for a closer study of the character and antecedents of members before making up the Committees. It will also facilitate adjournment very decidedly, as the House will be restive under the restriction of sessions without business.

NEW AND OLD BILLS IN THE SENATE.

The Senate had its time taken up today for an hour by the introduction of bills for reference. The only new bill of consequence offered was by Mr. PENTON, to regulate the collection of customs at the various ports of the United States. The first bill introduced in the new Congress was one for the reapportionment of the Representatives according to the ninth census. The greater part of the bills which failed in the last Congress were reintroduced today, the land grants and subsidies being among the earliest in the field. TIPTON started the Soldiers Homestead on its way; RAMSEY attended to the prospects of the Postal code; WILSON was beforehand with his cadet selection proposition; ROBERTSON and BLAIR proposed bills for the removal of disabilities; ANTHONY renewed the resolution for printing the Educational Report, and stated at the same time, that the Congressional Globe reports were being printed without a contract, the proprietors trusting to Congress for a renewal, or in case of a refusal to renew the contract, that they would be fairly dealt with; and COLE introduced the Income Tax Repeal bill. All the bills introduced today are laid on the table awaiting the formation of committees.

THE APPROPRIATIONS.

It is noted with considerable satisfaction that the appropriations for the fiscal years 1871 and 1872, though apparently $7,000,000 larger than last year, are absolutely $6,000,000 to $7,000,000 less, because in the present appropriations there are no unexpended balances raised on, which last year amounted to between $11,000,000 and $12,000,000. These are now covered into the Treasury at the end of each fiscal year by the operation of the law of July last, and each year's appropriations, therefore, are entirely separate and distinct from those of a previous year. This vastly simplifies the statement of the accounts of the appropriations, though it occasioned considerable annoyance at first, when the effect of the law was first felt.

PHOTOGRAPHING THE BRITISH COMMISSIONERS.

The British members of the High Commission visited Brady's photograph gallery today, and spent two hours in giving him sittings for their pictures, individually and in groups, and in examining and commenting on his historical collection of photographs. After they had their likenesses successfully taken they attended the reception of Mrs. GRANT.

TAMMANY TACTICS IN WASHINGTON.

Washington is undergoing an inoculation of Tammany jobbery in its city government. The Common Council is about to expire, and parties from New-York, representing that Tammany stool-pigeon, ALDEN FREAR, are seeking to impose upon the people of the city, through the Council, a water-meter which has never yet been adopted anywhere, at the enormous price of $40 each, when it is known that a better meter can be obtained for a quarter of the money. The Council sent a committee to New-York to examine meters not long since, but they fell into the hands of the Philistines and came home with snakes in their boots. Now a Ring has been formed, and one board has been successfully manipulated into passing the scheme. It is pending in the other, and a dozen men are egging it on, expecting small fortunes to come out of the transaction.

Dispatch to the Associated Press.

ENCOURAGEMENT FOR THE NEW LOAN.

The Secretary of the Treasury last night received an intimation that a large amount of the national loan will be taken in London.

CAUCUS OF REPUBLICAN SENATORS.

The Republican Senators held a caucus meeting this morning and appointed Messrs. SHERMAN, MORRILL (of Vermont,) HOWE, ITE and POOL a committee to revise the Senate Committee, and report their recommendations to a future meeting of the caucus. Some informal discussion took place as to the time of the adjournment of the session, and although no action was taken on the subject, the general sentiment seemed to favor a delay in adjournment at least until next week.

REMOVAL OF DISABILITIES.

The following is the text of the bill reported today by Senator ROBERTSON, of South Carolina, from the Select Committee on the Removal of Political Disabilities:

Be it enacted, &c., That all persons subject to any disability imposed by the Fourteenth Amendment of the Constitution of the United States are hereby relieved from such disability, provided that the following classes of persons are excepted from the provisions of this act, that is to say: First, all those who, being members of the Congress of the United States, withdrew from their seats and aided the rebellion. Second, all officers who, being officers of the army or navy of the United States, and being above the age of twenty-one years, left the army or navy and aided the rebellion. Third, all persons who, being members of the State Conventions which adopted the pretended ordinances of secession and voted in favor of the adoption of such ordinances. These excepted classes are reserved for future legislation.

Senator ROBERTSON says he will press the passage of his bill to the exclusion of all others of a private or local character.

NOMINATIONS.

Among the nineteen nominations not acted on by the Senate at the close of the last session, are the following:

R. H. Lee, Postmaster of Camden, N. J.; Wells Tyler, Jr., Postmaster of Palmyra, N. Y.; Harvey M. Buckley, Pension Agent of Louisville, Ky.; Ralph Abercrombie, Consul at Tumbez; John Bruce, District Judge of the Eastern District of Texas; John R. Dickson, Leroy S. Dyer, and Edwin Ellis, Indian Agents.

VESSELS FOR SAN DOMINGO.

Several owners of large steamers and other vessels now under foreign flags, have obtained from BARE & Co. Dominican registers, to be used in case of annexation. The owners of a line of foreign steamers, running between the United States and Europe, have already secured this accommodation for over 30,000 tons.

CONTESTED ELECTION CASES.

The testimony presented to the House, today, in the contested election case of JOHN CESENA against BENJ. F. MYERS, from Pennsylvania, is very voluminous, including the testimony of 5,000 witnesses, all of which has been ordered to be printed. There is also much testimony in the contested cases of DAVID S. GOODING against JEREMIAH M. WILSON, from Indiana; MCKENZIE against BRAXTON, from Virginia; HISLACK against WALLS, from Florida; and MAGRUDER against HOOPER, the sitting delegate from Utah.

SENATOR SUMNER.

Senator SUMNER was present at the session, to-day, seeming in better health than heretofore.

WORK OF THE JOINT HIGH COMMISSION.

The work of the Joint High Commission began and continues pleasantly. The subjects presented are deliberately considered, and gentlemen on both sides anticipate a favorable result.

SPAIN AND THE UNITED STATES.

Mr. Lopez Roberts Presents His Credentials as Representative of the New Spanish Monarch—Congratulatory Speeches.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—Mr. LOPEZ ROBERTS was received by the President today. The occasion was marked with general interest, the members of the Cabinet and the personal staff of the President being in attendance, and Mr. LOPEZ ROBERTS was accompanied by all the members and attaches of his legation in full court dress.

Mr. LOPEZ ROBERTS delivered the following speech:

MR. PRESIDENT: I have received the high mission of placing in your hands the letter whereby his Majesty King AMADEUS I. announced to you his advent to the throne of Spain. I therefore have the honor to deliver that written accredit you in the quality of his Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary to the United States of America. In a few days it will be two years, Mr. President, since on an occasion like the present I presented to you the letters which accredited me, in the same quality, in the name of the Provisional Government formed in Spain after the revolution of September, 1868. During the three years that have since then the Sovereign Spanish Cortes elected by universal suffrage, have settled in the most liberal manner the gravest and most important questions, which greatly obstructed social reforms and the development of the material interests of the nation, and they have given to their country a Constitution by which, while it embodies the most liberal political principles, are recognized at the same time all the essential attributes of a monarchy, the rights of the Spanish people thus being reconciled with the prestige and authority of the throne, on which reconstitution must rest the welfare and happiness of free nations having a monarchical form of government. I am happy in these friendship and the cordial relations which have ever existed between Spain and the United States lead me to hope that they will now be still more closely drawn, to which end, Mr. President, I shall make every effort in accordance with my duty and as the representative of the wishes of His Majesty the King; and I must express to you, before concluding, my profound and sincere thanks for the proofs of good will which you have also on me while I have had the good fortune to be in this Republic, accredited near your person as Minister of Spain.

The President replied as follows:

Mr. LOPEZ ROBERTS: I congratulate you upon the mark of the continued confidence of your Government, which the new credentials presented by you evince. This congratulation may be the more cordial as it confirms the general opinion of yours course in your long official residence here, a course distinguished by zeal and fidelity to your own country and by courtesy and consideration toward that to which you have been accredited. The recent changes in public persons and affairs in Spain are understood to have been so simply sanctioned by the popular will that they must be entirely acquiesced in, especially as, in order to those changes, elements repose upon a similar basis. I heartily desire that the new order of things there may tend to strengthen the bonds of amity and good will which have always been maintained between our respective countries, and that the United States may never forget that Spain was their special friend at an early and critical period of their career.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

THE RECOVERY OF JERUSALEM: A Narrative of Exploration and Discovery in the City and the Holy Land. By Capt. WILSON, R. E., and Capt. WARREN, R. E., &c., &c. With an Introduction by ARTHUR PENRHYN STANLEY, D. D., Dean of Westminster. Edited by WALTER MORRISON, M. P., Honorable Treasurer of the Palestine Exploration Fund. New-York: D. APPLETON & Co. 1871.

From the time of Bishop ARCULF, A. D. 770, up to the date of the researches of which the present volume contains an account, the great difficulty in the way of anything like an accurate acquaintance with the sacred localities arose from the changed surface of Jerusalem. The numerous clefts and ravines originally stretching through the city, if not wholly obliterated, have been, in most cases, so filled in with the débris of long-past ages as to be utterly undistinguishable. The cartography of Jerusalem presents no very impossible task, and has been thoroughly mastered, but it was over a hundred feet below the surface, in the midst of a dangerous and constantly shifting mass of stone, where galleries had to be driven, that the real secret of the hidden foundations of the Temple could be discovered. The labors of Capt. WARREN, fully detailed in this volume, are models of painstaking and arduous research. Sometimes weeks of toil were devoted to simply striking the rock-bed on which the Jerusalem of King Solomon must have stood; at other times the reward of dangerous tunneling was to find some mass of heavy masonry far down below, which could, perhaps, give some clue to the gigantic structures which must have once reared their heads above the City of God. Of minor troubles the explorers seem to have had their full share. With means utterly inadequate to the vast amount of work to be done, they were from time to time obliged to discontinue their enterprise from want of money, and were constantly annoyed by the ignorance, superstition, and imbecility of the city rulers. Provided with what appear to have been powers derived from the Porte, they were generally of that peculiar oriental character when to a page of verbiage in added two final lines completely annulling the preceding sentences. We owe to the Ordnance Survey undertaken in 1864-5, in part to the liberality of Miss BURDETT COUTTS, who subscribed £500, but equally to Capt. WILSON, who is very generously allowed by the Secretary of War to pay his own expenses. The object of the Survey was to supply Jerusalem with water; the city which the Psalmist describes as "beautiful for situation—the joy of the whole earth," having become through indolence and Eastern indifference one of the most pestilential in the world. The labors of Capt. WARREN, combined with those of Capt. WILSON, have determined the following fact: That no actual springs of water exist within the city walls, but that the whole mount within the Temple is honey-combed with cisterns, confirming the conjecture of TACITUS and the imagery of the Scripture, while at the same time "it takes away from them the foundation of exact and literal truth." As to the course of the ancient walls of the Holy Sepulchre, the question is still unsolved, and very unfortunately the explorations so far are completely at variance with former preconceived notions. As to the Temple, its position still remains in the same condition of uncertainty. One point, however, which seems to have been pretty accurately determined, is the probable immense height of the Temple wall over the Kedron valley. Regarding a portion of it, Capt. WILSON says: "It is almost impossible to realize the effect which would be produced by a building loftier and higher than York Cathedral, standing on a solid mass of masonry, almost equal in height to the tallest of our church spires."

Perhaps, the most important discovery was that made on the 14th of November, 1868, of certain letters, painted in red, five inches long, evidently quarry marks, in Phœnician, fifty feet from the surface, being inscriptions certainly dating from the building of the Temple. Another discovery was that of the fallen voussoirs, (wedge-like arch stones,) which belong to the other side of the arch known as Robinson's Arch, undoubtedly the bridge on which TITUS stood when he parleyed with the Jews after the capture of the Temple. As to the Temple of Solomon itself, its position, we must candidly confess, is moved hither and thither by the most august but conflicting opinions. The Royal Engineers seem to agree with Dr. ROBINSON, and suppose the Temple courts to have occupied the southern part of the Sanctuary, on a square of about 925 feet. Perhaps, its true position never can be learned until the debris filling up the sanctuary can be thrown aside, and Mount Moriah, as it was apparent in King David's time, be exposed to view. Undoubtedly, somewhere within this area the Temple of Solomon stood.

From all these doubts and uncertainties, we revert with pleasure to the discoveries made around the Sea of Galilee. There can now be no possible doubt but that Capernaum and Tel Hum are the same, and the fountain of Tabigah and the fountain of Capernaum are identical. The remains of the synagogue built by the Roman centurion, (Luke vii., 4, 5,) seem to corroborate the fact, and probably this is the very building where Christ gave his discourse recorded in John vi.

One thing exceedingly unfortunate in all the explorations, is the scarcity of fictile remains. Fragments of pottery, glass, implements, arms, seem to be almost wanting. What were found—save some portions of mug-handles of doubtful date, seem all to have belonged to a modern period. But one true Jewish seal or signet was found, with the Hebrew characters of the owner, HAGGAI, son of SHEBNIAH. Nothing is so inspiriting to the explorer as the discovery of fragments of this character, nor is there anything which so surely gives a clue to eras and dynasties. There is an excellent article, by the Count DE VOGÜE, on the Hauran country, and one on Sinai, and the probable route of the Jews to Egypt, by Rev. F. W. HOLLAND. An exceedingly meagre paper on the Moabite stone follows, which is disappointing from its brevity. Considering the great importance of this wonderful relic, perhaps the most remarkable ever brought to light, in comparison with which the Rosetta stone, on the pedestal of the column of Phocas, are insignificant, we had hoped to have found the fullest treatment. The brevity and unsatisfactory character of the paper by Rev. Mr. CHESTER on the pottery and glass found in the excavations is also to be regretted.

Praise as we may be to give full credit to the zeal of the explorers, and fully appreciating the discoveries made, only arrived at by years of assiduous toil, we must confess to some small amount of disappointment on the perusal of the volume. Save the contributions of the Count DE VOGÜE and Rev. Mr. HOLLAND, who are enthusiasts, the book is wanting in warmth and color, and partakes too much of the somewhat stiff style of engineering reports. The execution of the work seems to have been singularly unfortunate. The honorary officers of the fund, who ought to have edited the book, did not have the time; the military officers, on their return to England, were in ill health, and overworked with their special duties. Even Mr. DEUTSCH, who should have written up the Moabite stone, is indisposed; Rev. Mr. CHESTER complains of press of work, and, to sum up all, the Dean of Westminster, apologizes for the pressure of occupation which prevents his bestowing that continuous attention the subject deserves. If more pains had been taken in the construction of the book the chances of its being in familiar use would have been improved.

With these deductions, Jerusalem Recovered may be considered as a great accession to our stock of Sinaitic topography, and though much has yet to be accomplished, the book has the strongest claims to the attention of every Biblical student in the world.

A HANDBOOK OF LEGENDARY AND MYTHOLOGICAL ART. By CLARA ERSKINE CLEMENT. With descriptive illustrations. New-York: HURD & HOUGHTON. 1871.

It is not a fault of American culture that it unduly honors the past. "Le Legende Dorée," "The Lives of the Saints," "Il Perfecto Legendario," the Rhenish and the Norsemen's myths are not likely to divert our attention from that conveniently perennial phenomenon, "the present crisis." Mrs. CLEMENT has done well in compiling, from these and from many other sources, an account of all the principal legends that have given subjects to modern art. The roses and lilies of piety, the exquisite devotion and sacrifice of early Christian times, when the heavens were near to the earnest imagination of men, the "snow and rosebloom" of maidens' religion, the heroism of crusaders and of martyrs—these are the themes of her volume, and these are the needed commentary upon the art that fills the old galleries of Europe. Without a knowledge of the legends and stories illustrated in art, we can but poorly "beget that golden time again." The palm, the lily, the hind, the candelabrum, the scallop shell, and a hundred other accessories of treatment, are but sealed symbolisms to our ignorance. St. Matthias, with his lance; St. Thomas, with his builders' rule; the halberd of Thaddeus, and the chalice of John, do but pique the curiosity of the traveler, or provoke his thoughtless jest. All these things are vestiges of the most exquisite emotion, traces of the highest and deepest experiences through which the human heart has ever passed, and in the hearts of millions they still have power to evoke the purest emotions. We can well afford to know more of the lovely traditions which Mrs. CLEMENT has collected for us in this hand-book. Whether from the artist's, the historian's, or the theologian's point of view, they are interesting, and in this volume the principal legends of the dimmer centuries—Byzantine, Italian, Hebrew, Roman, German, Greek—are told, often in the naïve simplicity of the first narrators' styles. An explanation of "Symbolism in Art" is prefixed to the volume, which is arranged as a convenient work of reference. To those who are setting out to see old pictures, we can commend this book as a valuable companion.

Some New-Hampshire politicians express surprise that the Democratic State Committee has employed a man who served as an officer for four years in the rebel army, now in business at Manchester, to print their whole State ticket to be used on the approaching election day, although there are so many Democratic printers in the State who did not serve the rebels in the army.

The Treasurer of one of the Lawrence mills has testified before a committee of the Massachusetts Legislature that in his mills they have tried the ten-hour system for several years, and that he believes it to be beneficial to the moral and physical condition of the operatives, while the product of the mills had not decreased, as improved machinery makes up for the loss of the extra hour.

The general municipal election of St. Louis is to be held on the 4th of April, and the Missouri Democrat says that, as a spirited push is to be made to secure for some son of Missouri the Democratic nomination for the Presidential campaign of 1872, the Democrats will do their utmost to gain a victory in April, as a preliminary to the successful carrying forward of their plans.

Hon. JOHN J. JACOB was inaugurated as Governor of West Virginian on Saturday last, and delivered a brief address, noticeable for its moderate tone. The new Governor is a Democrat, but said that he did not conceive it to be his duty to regard the rights and interests of that party alone. He expressed his approval of the full and complete enfranchisement of all the people of the State, and counseled good feeling, economy, light taxation, the assumption of the State's fair portion of the debt of old Virginia, the encouragement of immigration, and the enlargement of educational facilities.

Mr. HENRY H. FAXON, a wealthy citizen of Quincy, Mass., at a meeting of his townsmen, on Saturday evening, said that he thought the business of the town should be taken from the hands of what might properly be called the whisky ring, and that, to secure this, he would himself pay for the ensuing year the salaries of all the officers of the town, provided that at a citizens' caucus, irrespective of party or sect, a list of active temperance men were nominated for candidates, and said candidates were chosen at the annual March meeting. The town refused to accept the conditions, and elected town officers on regular party tickets on Monday.

Senator PATTERSON addressed a political meeting in Nashua, N. H., on Monday evening. The brief report of his remarks in the Boston papers says: "In regard to annexation, he was in favor of accepting the Canadas and Provinces. He believed, with Senator SUMNER, that the time for the High Commission to hold its Convention would be when the English flag had been withdrawn from the Western Hemisphere. We have icebergs and hurricanes enough. We don't want San Domingo. The purchase money would amount to forty millions. It would cost ten millions each year to maintain a standing army, and no end of expense in fortifying. Moreover, it is a sickly climate, and the inhabitants are ignorant and ungovernable. France expended millions of treasure and lost thousands of her best soldiers in a vain endeavor to govern them, and it is but a few years since that Spain was forced from the island, after a loss of thirty thousand soldiers. Said the speaker, we don't want San Domingo, and if we did it is contrary to the first principles of a republican form of government to say to them, 'We want you and you are ours.'"

NOTES FROM THE PEOPLE.

A Dangerous Bridge.

I desire to call your attention to the very dangerous bridge which we all (who live on the Harlem and New-Haven Railroad) are compelled to cross every day. I refer to the bridge at One Hundred and Fourth-street, or just beyond the tunnel. This bridge is duck up there about forty feet above the water without the least protection of side railing or anything else to protect a train, in case of the breaking of an axle or rail, from going down into the water and grinding the cars and everybody in them into powder.

Mr. VANDERBILT would probably say in reply to this: Our trains have been running over them these twenty years, and nothing has happened to them. But this sort of argument proves just nothing; but when a train goes off that track and a hundred or more people are mangled and killed, that will prove something. Very likely Mr. VANDERBILT would take no notice of this, and very likely you will not notice it either; but you mark what I say, that unless a bridge is built there—the same as is now being built over the Harlem River—some terrible accident will come, sooner or later, to pass.

The number of trains is continually increasing each year, and, when the Hudson River trains run over the road, the number will be further greatly increased, and the danger thereby increased. Even now, almost every day there are trains which come so near meeting on that place that a slight breakdown to either one would, in all probability, result in a serious accident to one or both.

NEW-YORK, Monday, March 6, 1871.

Another Fact for Mr. Peter Cooper.

In your article upon the purchase of the Broadway House by Mr. WATSON or the Ring, you omit a very important item of testimony given to the Grand Jury by one of the Executors of the Putnam estate. It was stated that before the sale of the property to WATSON the award to the estate for taking a portion of the property was $62,000 or $63,000. When it became WATSON's property and the awards were published, the same property was awarded the sum of $100,000. I can now be found on the assessment by the testimony, and I consider this fact as the strongest evidence yet given of a gross fraud.

A Protest Against St. Patrick.

Can you tell me by what right the "municipal authorities" have ordered flags to be displayed upon all public buildings on the 17th inst.? Is St. Patrick already recognized as our patron saint, that our national flag must be hoisted in his honor? And why is it that while WASHINGTON'S birthday, which is an acknowledged national holiday, passed almost unnoticed by these "authorities," the honors to be paid to the Irish saint are duly provided for? Why is it? The answer is plain. It is because American men have sold their birthright for a mess of pottage, and now are humiliated beneath Irish rule. Absorbed in money-getting, they are forging for themselves golden chains which shall bind them and theirs in most ignoble slavery. If the flags must be displayed upon St. Patrick's Day, why not upon St. Nicholas', or St. Andrew's, or any other saint's day in the calendar, whose votaries have found a shelter among us? We are fast losing our nationality and becoming a mere "conglomeration of peoples." When will our American citizens arouse to a sense of their danger? Will they wait until their lives as well as their liberties are openly threatened? What is the humiliation of Paris compared to the degradation of New-York? the one conquered in fair fight by an honorable foe; the other betrayed by the supineness and greed of her own sons, into the power of a treacherous enemy who, while fattening upon the rich spoils, waits only his opportunity to show himself a cruel and heartless foe. AN INDIGNANT AMERICAN WOMAN.

The Weather Reports.

OBSERVER'S OFFICE,
SIGNAL SERVICE UNITED STATES ARMY,
NEW-YORK, March 7, 1871.

I am directed by the Chief Signal Officer of the army to inform you that the system of suspension of weather reports is due to the unwillingness of the Western Union Telegraph Company to continue until further negotiations the transmission of the reports upon the plans hitherto arranged, the period of four months for which original agreement was made having elapsed. No effort on the part of the War Department has been wanting to prevent by every means in its power any cessation of reports for even a single day, or to provide for such negotiations as should assure their continuance. Sufficient appropriations have been made by Congress, with every apparent disposition to favor and extend the duty. The reports are taken at the regular hours by the observers at the different stations, and the sole cause of interruption is the want of telegraphic facilities. Though the War Department have not been able for the moment to procure, Very respectfully,

C. R. ETTABROOK, Observer.
New-York.

Have Americans any Rights which Irishmen are Bound to Respect?

In view of the proposition at Albany to make St. Patrick's Day a legal holiday, you will not be surprised at the heading of this article. The 17th of March is close at hand, and it is highly probable that, as before, the occasion will be simply the stoppage of all trade and travel through the City the greater part of the day, putting everybody to the greatest loss and inconvenience. Now I, for one, am tired of this, and will subscribe $50 toward putting a legal stop to it. Our worthy Mayor and Superintendent KELSO ought to see to it, that the ordinance forbidding the obstruction of the streets is rigidly enforced, but the former is to revive the procession from the City Hall steps, and the latter probably thinks that a Hibernian parade is more important than the enforcement of a good law. As in the late Fenian parade, so I think is the burning din of St. Patrick, that the Marshal is liable to arrest for violation of the ordinance, and I should like to see it tried on him, whoever he may be. I am ready with my willingness to bear part of the expense.

Have we all bowed the knee to Baal? Has all our manhood disappeared?

...the absurd...ments. Dolphus ...these supposedi...tions, plaintiff purchased 225 shares, paying $6,000 for same. He alleges that defendants fraudulently were utterly false, and made to deceive—that defendant never owned the property in Idaho, as claimed by himself, having acted in the negotiation only as an agent for the owner, receiving a commission of $1,000 for his services; never $60,000. That the owner was paid $40,000 in cash and bonds of the Cosmos Silver Mining Company, worth nominally $60,000, but in reality not worth over $15,000. The stock the plaintiff purchased, he claims, was utterly worthless, and he demands judgment against defendants for the amount it cost him, with interest from March 14, 1870. The defendant admits the statements in regard to the incorporation of the Company and the purchase of the stock by the plaintiff, but denies all the other allegations.

The case is still on.

Ex-Judge Reynolds for plaintiff; Dennick & Pray for defendant.

MARINE COURT—TRIAL TERM—PART II.—MARCH 7.

Before Judge Curtis and a Jury.

ACTION FOR ASSAULTING A WOMAN.

Johanna Cronts vs. Nicholas Kruger and Balthaser Crueger.—The plaintiff brings her action to recover $10,000 damages, alleging the following state of facts: The son of plaintiff, a boy of about thirteen years, on Aug. 22, 1869, threw a stone, which broke a window belonging to the defendant. The wife of defendant came into the house of plaintiff, and demanded payment, which was promised; but this did not satisfy the husband, who came in and abused plaintiff, slapped her in the face, and finally pushed her down the door-steps, and kicked her in the abdomen. These injuries, plaintiff claims, resulted in a miscarriage and continued illness, for which the damages are demanded. The case is still on.

Messrs. Langhein for plaintiff; Jacob A. Gross for the defendants.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

FRANCE.

Gen. DE PALLADINES has assumed command of the National Guards of Paris, and has issued an order in which he asks the co-operation of the men in maintaining order, and declares that tranquillity alone can restore France. In disbanding the Twenty-third Corps, Gen. FAIDHERBE thanks them for the manner in which they had performed their duty, and denounced those who shirked their duty to the country. An effort to bring the Government of Defense to give an account of its acts was made in the National Assembly, on Monday, by LOUIS BLANC, VICTOR HUGO, and others, who suggested detaining the members of the Committee for that purpose. One member demanded their impeachment for high treason. Opposition was expressed to removing the Government to Paris, and at M. THIERS' request the Assembly went into Committee on the subject. The Assembly was in session yesterday, awaiting the report of the Committee on removal from Bordeaux.

GENERAL EUROPEAN NEWS.

The ship Mistress of the Seas recently foundered at sea and seventeen lives were lost.... A strike among workmen is in operation at Newcastle, England, because the employers refuse to pay weekly instead of fortnightly.... Mr. GLADSTONE, replying to Mr. DISRAELI's question in the House of Commons last night, said the Government had no knowledge of a secret treaty between Russia and Prussia. The Eastern Conference, he said, would not adjourn for some time to come. Right Hon. GEORGE J. GOSCHEN succeeds Mr. CHILDERS as First Lord of the Admiralty. Mr. STANSFELD succeeds Mr. GOSCHEN as President of the Poor Law Board, and W. E. BAXTER, Esq., succeeds Mr. STANSFELD as one of the joint Secretaries of the Treasury. Mr. SHAW-LEFEVER, Secretary of the Board of Trade, succeeds Mr. BAXTER as Secretary of the Admiralty. A London paper says the prospect for the settlement of all matters before the High Commission is very promising. The Pope delivered an allocution in a sacred consistory held recently, attacking the motives and acts of the Italian leaders, particularly the occupation of Rome; he also rejects the guarantees of spiritual power offered by the Government, laments the French war, and thanks the Catholic world for its devotion to him and the Church.

CONGRESS.

In the Senate yesterday, after a communication had been received from the President requesting that the day of final adjournment be not fixed this week, a memorial from J. C. ABBOTT was presented, claiming that he was the Senator legally elected from North Carolina, Z. B. VANCE not being eligible when voted for. A large number of bills were then introduced, and laid on the table to await the appointment of the Standing Committees. Among these was one for the removal of all legal and political disabilities from the people of the South, one for subsidizing steam-ships, several to aid in the construction of railroads, including a line from Portland to Chicago; one to encourage telegraphic communication between America and Asia and Europe, one for the incorporation of the Tehuantepec Railroad and Telegraph Company, and one for the repeal of the income tax. Mr. CONKLING introduced a bill for the submarine tunnel at New-York, and Mr. PEASTON introduced one for the regulation of the Custom-house service. A resolution was adopted authorizing the appointment of Commissioners and an International Congress on penitentiary discipline. The House resolution in favor of a final adjournment today was laid on the table, and the Senate then adjourned to Thursday.

In the House, a request was received from the President, that the day of final adjournment be not fixed this week. The question of the appointment of the Standing Committees, with a view to general legislation, was brought up by a resolution offered by Mr. NIBLACK, of Indiana, asking the Speaker to proceed at once to make the appointments. The Speaker expressed his disposition to so doing, and gave his reasons therefor. Mr. COX, Mr. DAWES and others were opposed to the appointment of the Committees, and favored an early adjournment. Mr. BUTLER desired that something should be done about the outrages in the South, and caused to be read some details of violent and lawless proceedings in South Carolina. The resolution of Mr. NIBLACK was finally laid on the table, and the House adjourned to Thursday.

THE STATE LEGISLATURE.

In the Senate, yesterday, a bill was introduced by Mr. LAWRS to repeal the act of 1869 amending the act of 1855 relating to the Erie, New-York Central, Hudson River and Harlem Railroad Companies, and providing that at the next meeting of the stockholders for the election of directors the Board of each Company shall go out of office, and that at that election and all subsequent ones the stockholders present, in person or by proxy, shall elect directors for the ensuing year. A bill was also introduced to amend the charter of the Police Life Insurance Company by transferring the custody of funds to the Police Commissioners. It allows a pension of $300 and makes a deduction of $1 a month from the pay of each policeman for the fund; and the Commissioners are empowered by a unanimous vote to dismiss any Captain, Sergeant, or clerk, and place him on the pension roll with not more than half pay. The bill to enable the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals to hold property, was passed at the evening session. In the Assembly, the bill authorizing the appointment of an inspector of gas meters, to reside in New-York, with deputies in Albany and Brooklyn, was passed. The bill providing for the election of a Supervisor at Large in Kings County was also passed. The House held an evening session, at which the bill to increase the pay of the Police force of Brooklyn was discussed. Mr. JACOBS advocated the measure, and Mr. GOODRICH opposed it, urging that Brooklyn was now paying taxes amounting to four per cent. After a lengthy debate the clauses increasing the pay of the Superintendent, Captains and Sergeants were lost, and that increasing the pay of patrolmen was carried. A motion to increase the pay of Sergeants was afterward adopted, and the bill ordered to a third reading.

GENERAL.

The New-Jersey Legislature has passed a bill for the prevention of bribery.

A riot occurred at Meridian, Miss., on Monday in which Judge BROMLETTE, a white man, and eight or ten negroes were killed. A negro was on trial, accused of incendiarism, when another negro shot the Judge in open Court.

Capt. T. W. PERKINS, a prominent steamship agent in New-Orleans, was found dead in his office, yesterday morning, with a bullet-hole in his heart, and other marks of violence on his person.

An English miner named WILLIAM SMITH was shot and killed by ARTHUR P. HOFFMAN, a pianist, at VIRGINIA CITY, Nevada, Monday, in a dispute about the Franco-Prussian war.

They are having very heavy rains in Southern California.

The authorities of San Francisco have demanded of the warden of the Nevada State Prison the surrender of the Tomlo car-robbers, to be tried for murder before the United States Circuit Court.

The Grand Jury, in the case of A. O. QUARLES, the defaulting treasurer of the Wheeling (W. Va.) Savings Institution, up to noon yesterday, had found nine true bills against him, and more are expected.

An attempt was made on Monday evening to throw the 9 P. M. Ashland, Penn., train off the track at Mahanoy Plane by placing a cross-tie on the track. It was discovered in time to prevent any disaster.

In the Filkins case at Albany the prosecution closed yesterday and the defense opened. The defense claim that they will prove an alibi.

Mr. LOPEZ ROBERTS presented his credentials to the President, yesterday, as Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary of the new King of Spain.

In the Court of General Sessions, yesterday, Judge BANFORD sentenced JOSEPH MCGRATH to two years and six months at hard labor in the State Prison, for stealing freight from the Hudson River Railroad depot.

Preparations for the Presidential Election.

While Republicans are satisfying themselves that there is no need to talk about the Presidential election just yet, the Democrats, with their usual activity, are leaving no stone unturned to render their preparations for the contest perfect in all directions. Nothing, of course, could suit their plans better than the present attitude of the Republican Party. The issue of Free Trade versus Protection is arraying one section of the party against the other; personal grievances here and there are elevated into national importance; and in the "Empire State" the prospect is particularly encouraging for the Democrats, because they have a large number of leading Republicans in their employment, and can safely reckon on receiving their very best services. It is always an advantage to have spies in the camp of the enemy. There is probably no Democrat extant who has the least doubt about which way New-York will go in the Presidential election. What they cannot get by their own strength they expect to gain through the feuds of their adversaries.

The South, it is confidently anticipated, will go bodily for Tammany, and money will be freely poured into that quarter as soon as the signal is given from head-quarters. Active exertions are already being made in the West, and several new journals have been started for the purpose of gradually getting the exalted truth into the minds of the people that JOHN T. HOFFMAN is the only man who can really save the country. The tax-payers of New-York kindly provide the money for this great missionary enterprise. No one supposes that the money raised here is devoted to the service of the public—if it were, we should not be able to boast of having the worst paved and the worst lit streets in the civilized world. Some of this money goes to enrich ex-bankrupt chair-makers and adventurers from "ould Ireland," and a part of it is prudently devoted to the consolidation of the new power which has been built up among us during the last few years. No one can fail to see that it would be a capital investment for the Democrats to spend a few millions in winning the next contest for the Presidency. With HOFFMAN in the White House, it is very difficult to say what might not be done for the elevation of mankind. The system under which New-York is governed, and which gives so much satisfaction to the Evening Post and many respectable citizens, might then be applied to the nation at large, and the blessings of free government be for the first time enjoyed, and the regeneration of the species finally accomplished. Where there are now two or three corrupt Judges there might soon be two or three score, and a state of things would arise to which the annals of Rome in its later days would afford no parallel. This is naturally an inspiring thought for any true Democrat, as Democrats go nowadays, and we cannot wonder that the party is extremely well pleased to see Republicans saying with Dr. WATTS' sluggard, "You have woke me too soon, let me slumber again." Under our new patron saint, the blessed Saint Patrick himself, (whose life has been most obligingly forwarded to our office, as one step toward converting the heathen,) we may confidently look for an era of which GEORGE WASHINGTON and other old-fashioned patriots never dreamed.

In the meantime, however, we hope there are some people here and there who will keep their attention fixed on what is going on in several parts of the country. As Democratic principles once more gain ascendency in the South, the spirit of '61 is reviving. The nearer the Democrats approach to power, the more is the South disposed to shake off the incubus which the war left upon it. Let HOFFMAN be elected, and the work of Union men will be undone as fast as local circumstances will permit. There is not much excuse for our deceiving ourselves on this score. "The war is not over," cried the rebels and their sympathizers in 1865, and we may be pretty sure they meant what they said. They are already giving us a taste of what we may expect when Republican apathy and Republican quarrels have allowed HOFFMAN to slip into the President's chair. In our opinion, the country needs the Republican Party now as much as it did during the years of the war, but we are aware that this opinion is not shared by many Republican leaders. It is a suicidal policy for Republicans to go on hacking each other with their own weapons, but then it happens to be the policy much in vogue just now, and of course the Democrats are very eager to pat the combatants on the back. There are many Republicans today, who would prefer the Democrats and free trade to their own party and protection. There are others who think that the whole duty of man in the present year of grace is to keep up a constant nagging at President GRANT. It is all very fine to say that the "heart" of the country is "sound," but great causes have ere now been entirely ruined by a much smaller degree of carelessness and indifference to public questions than we now find prevailing. If Senator SUMNER would give us his views on this subject, he might do greater service, and set more in accordance with the high reputation which he enjoys, than by concentrating all his thoughts on San Domingo.

The Condition of the South.

What the South now wants, above all other things, is an efficient administration of the law, and that absolute security of person and property which an efficient local administration of justice alone can impart. There are portions of the late slaveholding States in which these conditions exist. There are States in which they are not to be found. The whole South suffers in consequence. Enterprise and capital are repelled; and the area of lawlessness widens with the impunity of which it seems to be assured. Certain general characteristics, moreover, invest the prevailing crimes with national interest. Agents of Federal authority are singled out for attack. The classes who have a peculiar claim upon the Federal Government for protection are in an especial manner victims of undetected outrage and unpunished wrong. Here and there, ordinary travel is dangerous, and between the chief city of Kentucky and its capital even postal communication has been interrupted by organized and murderous ruffianism.

The failure of the States in which these forms of crime abound to make adequate provision for its repression and punishment, entails upon the General Government a duty from which it cannot shrink. When, as in South Carolina, local authority is too feeble for its work, or when, as in Kentucky, the local legislature doggedly withhold from the Executive the power for which he pleads, Federal authority must step in. The transfer of infantry from the Platte to Kentucky is an indication at once of the President's appreciation of the trouble, and of his determination to use the means at his command for the maintenance of order. But the power of the President is very limited, and the present circumstances are peculiar. How much of the lawlessness is tainted with positive disloyalty, and how much of it is traceable to the weakness or negligence of local Courts and officers, is a question that will not be satisfactorily answered until the Special Committee of the Senate completes its inquiry. That may consume considerable time—and in the meantime the difficulties grow larger and more complicated.

There is grave reason for the demand that Congress shall not adjourn until a matter which concerns the whole country, quite as much as it concerns the South, has been attended to. The danger of hasty legislation is, indeed, almost as great as that arising from delay; and it is aggravated in this instance by a tendency in some quarters to make all things tributary to partisan effect. The objects to be attained are the protection of life and property throughout the South, and, notably, the suppression and punishment of the bands that wage war against both. So necessary is it that nothing in the way of legislation shall be attempted which does not take hold of popular confidence, that the most desirable method would seem to be to defer a general measure until the investigation now in progress determines specifically the hidden nature and extent of the crimes calling for Congressional action. Till this stage be reached, may it not be possible to provide, with more or less effectiveness, for the urgent passing want by enlarging the means and the discretionary power of the President? We can readily understand Gen. GRANT's unwillingness to add to responsibilities already sufficiently great. But the mingled moderation and firmness of his course, his thorough knowledge of the situation, and his superiority to all the arts of the demagogue, have created a feeling of confidence in his purposes and judgment that would sustain him in any proceeding he may be authorized to adopt.

The Late Bishop Andrew.

The death of JAMES OSGOOD ANDREW, senior Bishop of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, took place at Mobile on the 2d inst. Not only from his venerable years and distinguished position, but because of the important part taken by him in one of the most remarkable theological movements of the age, the decease of this prelate attracts wide attention and comment. Bishop ANDREW was made the direct cause of the schism and final separation of the Methodist Church North and South; and his name will thus always retain historical celebrity, apart from any reputation attaching to his attainments and services.

Bishop ANDREW was born in Elbert County, Georgia, in 1793, and was, therefore, seventy-eight years of age at the time of his death. He led an exceedingly active life—his first sermon having been preached in 1811, and his last in New-Orleans on Sunday, Feb. 19, ult., and he was esteemed to be a man of great learning and intellectual vigor. The Methodist Episcopal Church in the United States, as is well known, consisted, up to 1844, of one organization. Slaveholders were members of the Conferences. Indeed, in 1828, a slaveholder was elected by the General Conference the representative of the Church to the British Conference. Some ominous uneasiness had begun to be felt in 1840—a feeling that found not dissimilar expression in legislative bodies; for, in that year, at the General Conference, a formal resolution was passed to the effect that "mere ownership of slave property, in States or Territories where the laws do not admit of emancipation and permit the liberated slave to enjoy freedom, constitutes no legal barrier to the election or ordination of ministers to the various grades of office known in the ministry of the Methodist Church."

After this there was ceaseless agitation in the Church, corresponding to that which was going on outside of it. At the General Conference in New-York in 1844, Bishop ANDREW, who had married a lady possessing slaves, was requested for that reason by a large number of members to resign. He did not do so, and subsequently an act was passed by a majority of the Conference, requiring him to desist from the exercise of his Episcopal functions. Upon this the representatives of thirteen annual Conferences embraced in the slaveholding States, presented a declaration setting forth their solemn belief that a continuance of the jurisdiction of the General Conference over the annual Conferences thus represented would be inconsistent with the success of the Methodist ministry in the slaveholding States. This was accompanied by a formal protest against the action of the majority. Subsequently the General Conference considered a plan of separation. This contemplated an amicable adjustment of boundaries, and a fair division of property. Disagreements, however, arose, the South alleging that the North wanted all the property; and a General Conference was held later in the North, and decided that the plan of separation could not be carried into effect. Suit was, however, brought in the United States Courts by the Southern Branch to enforce a division of the property of the General Book Concern, previously held in common. The Court sustained the action, and thus the split was made effectual and irrevocable.

Bishop ANDREW, the occasion of the difference, was naturally a devoted champion of his own section, and such he always continued to be. When the first General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, was held at Petersburg, Va., in 1846, Dr. JOSHUA SOULE was the senior Bishop. Dr. ANDREW, however, lived to attain that distinction, both before and after which he labored prodigiously to give the organization cohesion and efficiency. It is said that their Book Concern, which was built up in Nashville, had issued before the war over six hundred millions of pages of reading matter; and there is no doubt of the vast increase of its membership after the secession, or of its comparative denominational influence. It is said that HENRY CLAY, who was a warm personal friend of Bishop ANDREW, declared that the "Northern fanaticism" of the Methodist Episcopal Church was the entering wedge to the dissolution of the Union; and there is no doubt that the embittered feelings originating in this difference had potent effect in lending fierceness and implacability to the conduct of the subsequent war. It is a satisfaction to reflect that Bishop ANDREW lived long enough to see what was the occasion of both religious and civil hostility swept away, and to resume in every sense those relations of amity over which slavery had cast a cloud. His later life was embellished with good works which all can admire, and we are quite able to share in the consolation of the vast body of his friends and co-believers that he died "with his harness armor on," after a long career of usefulness and honor.

Crime on the Outbreak.

The disposition to resort to deadly weapons, which seems again to be on the increase among us, undergoes no check on the day of rest. Even in great cities, Sunday remains for the most part, an occasion of quiet and repose: so that it might be expected that even the criminal classes would be induced by the general atmosphere about them to let their "evil passions" sleep. Sometimes, however, as if in sheer rebellion against the influences of the time, we hear of outbreaks of wickedness on Sunday such as make its record of guilt as bad as, or worse than, the prevailing daily average. Last Sunday, as we partly showed in an article yesterday, was an instance in point. Besides the cases already referred to, a poor infirm woman, sixty-five years of age, named CATHARINE GALLAGHER, was set upon by another woman and savagely cut with a hatchet. The assailant escaped and has not been arrested. Later in the day a man named MAGENTY, while sitting quietly in his room, was attacked by an Italian, one CARDOZA, who crept stealthily up to his victim from behind, and plunged a stiletto into his back. This scoundrel has also made good his escape. Just about the same time the knife was at its bloody work in the hands of THOMAS MILLS, who cut a shipmate, DAVID PURNELL, fiercely in the head and arm on board the schooner Mary Farr, lying at Pier No. 54 North River. In addition to these atrocities, two persons were murderously assaulted in the streets on Sunday night, by unknown miscreants, and so much hurt as to be taken to the hospital by the Police. All these details were brought in by reporters and made public on Monday morning. There were several other cases of stabbing and maiming in the suburbs, accounts of which were subsequently received.

While these dismal scenes were occurring, or at all events on the same day, the body of MADISON COMYN—who is believed to have been murdered and thrown overboard near the Pavonia Ferry—was found floating in the North River, and an unhappy woman, once an ornament of respectable society, laid violent hands on herself in Greene-street. We do not know that, considering the promiscuous character and exceptional temptations of our City population, the aggregate of wrong-doing is remarkable; but the peculiar character of most of these crimes, and the day on which they were committed, may well attract the attention of our churches. Such things imply that punishment is not swift and sure enough, that education is defective in amount or regulation, and that our Police is either not numerous enough, or not sufficiently dreaded among the floating population. It is to be hoped that Recorder HACKETT, or whatever other Magistrate may be concerned, will deal with the utmost rigor with all cases in which deadly weapons have been employed. Hardly a row at present occurs in New-York streets or drinking-shops where knives and pistols are not whipped out. It may not be easy to prevent in all possible ways the desecration of the Sabbath; but it is surely practicable to strike such terror among these carriers of hidden daggers and pistols as materially to restrict their present amusements.

The Tax Levy Jungle.

What has become of the bill introduced by TWEED at the beginning of the session, to transfer to himself and his Ring associates the power of raising and distributing the money annually collected from our tax-payers? Why is it allowed to slumber in the Committee of which TWEED is Chairman? Has it not received the indorsement of NATHANIEL SANDS and of his alter ego, or rather his docile pupil, the venerable PETER COOPER? Have they not pronounced it a wise and beneficent scheme, "calculated to promote the substantial welfare of the City?" Where is the hitch? It has, to be sure, been intimated that the scheme is not altogether satisfactory to some of the Ring subordinates, who are growing restive under the selfish tyranny of their masters; but what of that? They can be whipped into submission. Is Senator MICHAEL NORTON, the defeated champion of "Young Democracy," to be allowed to thwart a grand Ring measure like this? If he continues refractory, cannot TWEED buy up a Republican Senator or two to supply his place?

At any rate it is time that a movement of some kind was made with regard to the City Tax Levy. The delay affords ground for the insinuation, already hinted in several quarters, that the bill was introduced with no expectation of its passage, but merely to put off the consideration of the City and County Tax Levies to the last days of the Legislature, when, as usual, TWEED, SWEENY and CONNOLLY expect to be able, in the haste and confusion of the closing hours of the session, to smuggle into the levies a lot of fraudulent jobs and irrelevant legislation, designed to promote their private and political ends.

It will be recollected that in his annual Message, sent to the Legislature on the first day of the session, Gov. HOFFMAN called special attention to the manner in which the New-York Tax Levies are engineered through the two Houses, and he advised, or pretended to advise, the Ring to relieve him hereafter of his share of the responsibility. "It is not right," he said, "to leave me no alternative but to sign bills containing objectionable items, or to refuse my signature and thus defeat appropriations which are necessary." The introduction of the new Tax Levy scheme is believed by many to have had no other purpose than to furnish a pretext for delaying, as usual, the consideration of the Tax Levies, and thus screening the Governor, as well as his backers, from responsibility for the frauds they design to perpetrate under cover of this year's Tax Levy.

It becomes the duty, therefore, of every Republican member of the Legislature to guard against this transparent trick of their adversaries. We warn them in advance that every one of them who sanctions by his vote this year a repetition of the frauds and swindles that have been perpetrated in the New-York Tax Levy for years past, will be a marked man. It is useless for them to say, as they said in relation to the Croton Water bill, that this is not, or ought not to be, a party question. It is a party question. To say nothing of the duty of Republicans to oppose corrupt legislation under any and all circumstances, they ought to know that every bill whose object or result is to increase the power and patronage of the Tammany Ring furnishes a formidable weapon against the Republican Party. Every Tax Levy that has passed the Legislature in the last five years has put in the hands of TWEED, SWEENY and HOFFMAN not less than a million dollars of stolen money, which has been used to defeat the Republican Party in this State. The new Water bill will enable this clique to colonize three counties with Democratic voters for the next Presidential election,—and this was among its chief objects. We say, therefore, to the Republicans in the Legislature, "Do not vote for any New-York Tax Levy this year until you have scrutinized every item in it, and until every amendment has been printed and placed on file. Oppose every motion or resolution fixing the hour of final adjournment until after the City and county Tax Levies have been considered in detail by both houses, and full opportunity given to every member to discuss each and every item. Then, if provisions are fraudulently inserted in the levies after their passage, as is believed to have been done heretofore, you will be prepared to expose them."

Log-Rolling.

Gov. AUSTIN, of Minnesota, has entered a protest against "log-rolling" in legislative matters. A bill known as the Land Division bill, a corrupt and unjust measure, was sent to him for his official approval, and he objects that it "has not the free and voluntary consent of a majority of both Houses of the Legislature." True, a majority voted for it, but the majority, he asserts, was the result of a combination by which members were induced to vote yes in consideration of support being rendered to measures in which they were individually interested. "Other members," he adds, "have been induced to do the same thing on the promise, or with the understanding, that measures which were obnoxious to them would be defeated." This bargaining and trafficking the Governor refuses in any manner to sanction. "I can never write the word 'approved' to an act which I am fully convinced has been able to secure a majority only by these means." Suppose another Gov. AUSTIN to occupy the Executive chair at Albany, what a commotion there would be! If, instead of acquiescing in every infamous bill that passes through the Legislature, the Governor of New-York scanned the means employed to secure its passage—the bribery, the bargaining, the shameless combinations, that contribute to its success—what would be the fate of the Erie bills, or the bills forced through to serve Tammany's ends? If Gov. AUSTIN's idea of duty as an honest man, and a faithful servant of the people, will not allow him to sanction, even indirectly, the results of legislative knavery, by what moral principle does Gov. HOFFMAN regulate his official conduct?

MINOR TOPICS.

We have received a copy of statistics which ought to be more publicly available, with reference to the small-pox cases admitted to the hospital on Blackwell's Island during the present year, and the number of these that have proved fatal. It appears that between the 1st January and the 7th March 233 small-pox patients had been admitted. Of these 49 have died, showing a percentage of 20 34. We need hardly remark that these figures reveal a truly alarming rate of mortality. For, let it be noted the admissions during the month of January and the earlier part of February must have been very light, since 233 patients, distributed over nine and one-half weeks, show an average weekly admission of about twenty-four cases. Before the hospital was filled beyond its actual capacity of sixty beds, the chances of recovery must have been at least double what they now are, when 112 patients are crowded within it. During the last few weeks the percentage of deaths must, therefore, have been simply enormous. We cannot hesitate, in view of such incontrovertible facts, to stigmatize the mode at present adopted by the Board of Health of dealing with small-pox patients as a species of organized murder, utterly disgraceful in any civilized community.

Mr. WENDELL PHILLIPS delivered a stirring address last night at Steinway Hall, for the benefit of the French relief fund. Mr. PHILLIPS was never backward in assisting a good work, and he easily earned a thousand dollars for the relief fund last night. In the course of his address he referred to the government of New-York, which was, he said, controlled by comparatively few men, "every one of whom ought to be hung." Shocking, shocking, some people will say—but the audience last night received the sentiment with "loud and continued applause," and Mr. PHILLIPS showed before he had done that he did not speak at random. Mr. PHILLIPS has always been in the habit of speaking his mind, and half a dozen men of his stamp might give force and direction to the public indignation now slumbering in regard to our local rulers.

The secret papers of the Second Empire have been remorselessly exhumed by the late Republican custodians of the Tuileries. Among the latest batch published there are some sufficiently curious acknowledgments of gift copies of the Emperor's Life of Cæsar. How curious, in the light of recent events, does a sentence like this sound, indited by Prince WILLIAM of Baden? "Will your Majesty deign to permit me to preserve your book as a pledge of the sentiments of benevolence toward all mankind which it inculcates, as well as a proof of the affection which it causes him to enjoy who is proud of the honor of styling himself your most humble and obedient servant." Or this from Prince CHARLES, of Hohenzollern: "I pray your Majesty to accept the very feeble expression of the profound and lively gratitude with which I receive this souvenir of friendship, together with the assurance of all the sentiments of respect and attachment—which I also express on behalf of all my family—with which I shall never cease to respond to it." These were written five years ago; but the world moves swiftly in these days.

If the fuse which was made at the last Philharmonic concert should lead the directors to insist rigorously on their rule not to allow encores under any circumstances, a great blow would be struck at one of the commonest nuisances of the day. It is generally a wrong to the artist to insist upon the repetition of a piece, and when he or she is disposed to repeat it, it is very often a bore to the audience. To hear a thing once is enough for moderate people, but a few greedy ones generally contrive to set up a great clamor, and the entertainment is prolonged by tiresome repetitions throughout the evening. In the recent Nilsson performances of oratorio, long choruses in the "Messiah" were redemanded by a noisy clique—it would be almost as reasonable to "encore" a sermon. The custom is one which ought to be broken down, and the reform can be appropriately begun at the Philharmonic concerts.

It is to be hoped that the public will rate at its proper value the disingenuousness of sundry Democratic journals, who have been advertising to the apparent increase of the national appropriations for the year as a proof of extravagance. The fact is, as pointed out in our Washington dispatch, that the appropriations for the fiscal year 1871-72, though possibly some seven millions in excess of those of the previous year, are really from six to seven millions less. In crediting the Government, therefore, with increased expenditure, we write simply make a blunder of nearly fourteen millions of dollars, which, under the operation of the act of July last, could not be derived as heretofore from unexpended balances, and so had to be directly credited. This complete mode of keeping the national accounts will, of course, give, after the year just provided for, no occasion for misrepresentation.

There has been a slight change in the construction of the English Ministry, the chief feature of which is the appointment of Mr. STANSFELD to the post of President of the Poor Law Board. This a concession to the Radicals, who have long insisted that Mr. STANSFELD's claims have never been properly recognized. Mr. GOSCHEN, one of the members for London, is now First Lord of the Admiralty, vice Mr. CHILDERS, resigned through ill health. These alterations are of no political importance, although they may possibly lead to increased efficiency in several departments.

It is the habit of orators and journals of the Democratic Party to describe the Southern States as the victims of oppression. Their present Governments, we are told, have been forced upon them, and are maintained against the will of the people, by Federal bayonets. The absurdity of these representations does not prevent their constant repetition. There can be no impropriety, then, in putting on record the declaration of Monday's World, synopsis of the Southern Democracy and its plans for 1872. The World says:

"The State Constitutions, formed under the pressure and coercion of the Reconstruction acts, are amendable by the people of each State, like all other State Constitutions. The freedom to make a new Constitution is as fully possessed by the Southern as it is by each of the Northern States."

We quote again from the same article:

"None of the new Amendments prohibits the States from requiring a property qualification, or an educational qualification for voters. Every State is free to adopt either or both."

That is to say, the policy by which the Republican Party has rescued the South to the Union is not a tyrannical policy, as the World itself has many times alleged it to be, but secures to the Southern people entire control over their local affairs. We knew all this before. It is something, however, to have the fact confirmed by Democratic lips.

AMUSEMENTS.

Theatricals.

BOOTH'S THEATRE.—"MUCH ADO ABOUT NOTHING."

Of all the tests of dramatic ability, Shakespearean comedy is the most delicate and critical. It is impossible to catch and convey the flavor of these matchless compositions without a degree of study, refinement, and intelligence of subtlety that cannot well be feigned. Shakespeare's glorious flights of humor and imagination can be appreciated in the reproductive sense only by kindred spirits. His pure empyrean, with its rosy flushes of fantastic thought, and its swift strokes of dazzling wit, can neither be attained nor comprehended by common clay. Thus, mental poverty in an actor, or carelessness of knowledge, is more surely revealed by his attempts on the master's comedy than on his tragedy. The owl who got such repute for wisdom was a melancholy or tragic bird. Had he tried a part of unmixed joviality, he would surely have been found out. The solemn aspects of life, and its coarser emotions, are far more intelligible to the average mind than the swiftest and more complex evolutions of the imagination and fancy. Hence it is that we have more Romeos than Mercutios, and more Othellos than Benedicks. The dark and positive parts are most practicable to a mediocre touch, and it is easier to paint a storm-cloud than a rainbow.

We have already borne witness that, so far as its mounting is concerned, "Much Ado About Nothing," just brought out at Booth's Theatre, is most worthily done there. Our estimate of the importance of Mr. BOOTH's work, and of the way, in general, in which he does it, is so high that we would gladly carry unqualified commendation further, could we feel justified in so doing. It is, however, our duty to say that the acting of "Much Ado" is materially below its accessories. The principal parts are not within the reach of the performers; and, although there are fragments here and there which are meritorious, the effect of the whole comedy is unsatisfactory and disappointing. In the first place, Mr. BOOTH fails to embody Benedick. He lacks both the soldierly port and the elegance proper to the character. Benedick is "a young Lord of Padua," a favorite of Princes, a man who, despite his earlier misogyny, is "merry"—not the "Prince's jester," truly, but no less his chosen companion. Mr. BOOTH looks like a saturnine and consumptive scholar inappropriately dressed for a masquerade. Benedick, a warrior, accustomed to carry his life in his hand, bold, careless, volatile and gay, is yet attempered in spirit by the gracious atmosphere of high breeding in which he habitually moves. Mr. BOOTH's manner is clumsy and furtive, his carriage is crouching and inelegant, and there is nothing of high breeding about him at all. He winks continually at his interlocutors and punches the Prince, to whom he owes allegiance, under the ribs by way of enforcing a jest. He seeks to make up for a natural lack of vivacity and effervescence by devices that sometimes carry him to the dangerous edge of caricature. His expression varies playfully between sidelong malevolence, sardonic humor and speculative severity. All this is more like Mephistopheles than Benedick; yet even the Prince of Darkness is a gentleman, and unfortunately this is the characteristic of Benedick which Mr. BOOTH has apparently least considered. He makes his here sinister, whereas SHAKESPEARE made him the soul of frankness, and infuses into him a certain snaky concentration which is curiously at variance with the reckless gallantry that Benedick, if anything, should display.

There are, notwithstanding, passages in which, by reason of great earnestness, Mr. BOOTH is highly effective. The scene in which he engages to challenge Claudio is the most conspicuous of these. Here the actor wins deserved and hearty applause, which, on the first night, was rather increased than diminished by the blunder made in prematurely lowering the curtain-drop. The energy shown here is impressive. Yet it is plainly a matter of the will rather than of the emotions. The artist feels the need of doing something, and he calls up all his resources for a determined effort. And this again at once suggests Mr. BOOTH's inadaptability to the part, since it exhibits a kind of implacable resolution as a substitute for spontaneity, just as before a spasmodic mirth does duty for effervescing and ever-running gayety. In the challenge scene, again, Mr. BOOTH is irrationally portentous and menacing. He behaves to Claudio like a man who has received some fearful and unpardonable personal injury; whereas, in point of fact, Benedick, very much against his will, is challenging his dearest friend simply to gain favor in the eyes of his mistress. Compunction, therefore, and not baleful hate should show through the fixedness of his resolve. What Mr. BOOTH does best in Benedick is the delivery of the soliloquies. There is much discrimination and careful study here, and an apprehension of the ludicrous, which is not as palpable as it might be in his management of other portions of the text.

Miss BELLA PATEMAN is unequal to Beatrice. She is actress-like, careful, and, in a conventional way, efficient in the character. But she, too, lacks elegance, airiness, the indefinable sparkle and grace that pertain to Leonato's daughter. Beatrice is a noble lady as well as a witful woman, a creature highly gifted, imaginative, sensitive and tender. The Chronicle will should never be so dense but that these qualities may be discerned beneath; for Benedick would otherwise never have loved his true mould as the fine scene after the climax in the chapel very well indeed, and deserves much credit for it. Mr. J. H. McVICKER can play some parts excellently, but Duplessy is not of the number. The impersonation is in fact strikingly inferior. No Italian or Sicilian ever had the rasping voice that Mr. McVICKER thinks proper to conjure up for the occasion; and his performance is unremarkable for the absence of emotion or mellowness. Its general effect may be described as that of a mysterious cross between Antipholus Sirrah and Justice Greedy, although we may doubt whether either COOPER or MASSINGER would be much charmed by the suggestion. Mr. McVICKER spoiled one of Duplessy's best speeches on Monday by transposing the words "proved" and "thought"—the direst slip, perhaps, that could be made in the whole text—and altogether, whatever his appreciation of the exaggerated humor of the part, he failed to convey a keen sense of it to the audience. Mr. McVICKER is a capital artist in some things, and we regret he should challenge criticism in what he does least well. Miss TERESA SELDEN is not yet nervous enough for HERO. Mr. BARRETT is not very princely in Don Pedro, but he is inoffensive and quiet, and Mr. SHERIDAN is tolerable in Claudio. Messrs. FREDO and ANDERSON deserve praise for judicious treatment of the brothers Leonato and Antonio. Mr. FATEMAN is likewise creditably painstaking in Verges, and Mr. PITOU is a self-possessed and well-spoken Don John. The other persons of the comedy call for no especial mention. The piece is unpainfully dressed, and the scenes are excessively handsome. Mr. WITHAM, the scenic artist, has gained laurels in this revival that will not soon fade. His landscape work is poetic as well as conscientious, and his architectural masses are boldly conceived and exquisitely finished. It is no agreeable thing at any time to say that a jewel is unworthy of its casket; but the bounteous praise that is due to good art would be sharn of encouragement and value were the truth withheld upon occasions which so strongly suggest its utterance.

THE NATHAN MURDERER.

The Assassin Known to the Police—Failure to Find Enough Evidence Against Him—Inadvertent Confession of a Professional Burglar—Statements from Reliable Sources.

A story was published by a morning journal, yesterday, in regard to the Nathan murder, in which mention was made of the hitherto unpublished fact that a professional burglar named FORRESTER had long been suspected of being the assassin by the Police. The report follows the attempt to fasten the celebrated criminal on WILLIAM FORRESTER, through the confession which it was supposed GEORGE ELLIS, one of his "pals" in numerous burglaries, might make, either intentionally or inadvertently. The statements made in the report were very nearly correct, and were generally unlike a recent Herald story, chiefly noticeable for the discovery of the Nathan murderer published in the same newspaper. The TIMES announced the imprisonment of ELLIS at the Sixth Ward Station-house several weeks ago, but refrained from mentioning him by name, for fear that it would injure if not defeat the plans of the detectives. It merely stated that the prisoner was supposed to have some knowledge of the murder, although the reporter was in full possession of all the facts in the case, which, as it was believed, were not known to more than four persons. One of these was the late Superintendent JOURDAN, whose suspicions fastened on FORRESTER from a remark which ELLIS was reported to have made in the Tombs Prison, where he was imprisoned for burglary. ELLIS told to the late Superintendent that ELLIS had said, on hearing of the Nathan murder, that he had planned with FORRESTER previous to his arrest and sentence to "crack" the house of Mr. NATHAN, in Twenty-third-street. Mr. JOURDAN privately obtained a writ of habeas corpus from Judge CARDOZO, and had ELLIS brought from Sing Sing in a secret manner, and placed in the Franklin-street Station-house, where he was kept in the most rigid seclusion. Before Mr. JOURDAN had sufficient time to elicit any confession from ELLIS, he died, leaving to Judge CARDOZO, a relative of Mr. NATHAN, and Judge DOWLING, his personal intimate, the task of unravelling the great mystery to which he had devoted his constant and unflagging attention. So reported and close did he proceed in his plans that it was not until after his death that Mr. KELSO, his chief detective and subsequent successor, became aware that he entertained any suspicions against ELLIS or FORRESTER. After keeping ELLIS here for six weeks, he was sent back to State Prison without having obtained an his "pal." In consideration of the premature publication of some of the minor facts about the detectives' operations, it will not do any harm to mention now that ELLIS has been constantly watched by a fellow convict ever since he re-entered the prison doors at Sing Sing. At one of the debates it was thought that they had enough evidence to make out a case against FORRESTER, but they found that it was not sufficient to prove him guilty under the law. The belief, however, that he is the man has almost strengthened into a certainty.

... to Mormonism—Lecture by Rev. Dr. Henry C. Potter.

Rev. HENRY C. POTTER, D. D., delivered a lecture last evening in the hall of Rutgers Female Seminary on Fifth-avenue. His theme was: "Some clues to Mormonism discovered on the spot."

Last Summer the lecturer, in company with other excursionists, visited Salt Lake City, and examined into much of its latter-day saintliness. The first clue to the secret of the system was, he said, the almost utter absence of intellectual and the great preponderance of animal traits of character, even in the expression of countenance. Their faces were as blank as those of cattle. The Temple, instead of having a capacity of fifteen thousand—as was alleged by the "saints"—really accommodated about six thousand persons. All but a few of the leaders, he continued, are ignorant dupes, magnetized by personal power and cunning of BRIGHAM YOUNG. He has a Cleopatran gift of discovery, and a master mind as an Executive. But the Pacific Railroad is the lever that will peaceably solve the problem of Mormonism. It cannot be conquered otherwise without lamentable bloodshed. Their hymnody, with a grossly-boxed, excellently-played organ and finely-managed voices, was the most sublime. A special edition of doggerel hymns, reminding the pilgrim of life in Utah in glowing colors, was issued in foreign lands to lure the converts, many of whom emigrated in entire ignorance of the practical doctrine of polygamy. The head of BRIGHAM would end the Mormon power, as there was great dissatisfaction already existing among the people. Persecution would only add to their strength, as it did at Nauvoo.

The Historical Society—Valuable Gifts.

The New-York Historical Society met at their rooms, corner of Second-avenue and Eleventh-street, last evening. Hon. AUGUSTUS SCHELL, the First Vice-President in the chair. Mr. GEORGE HENRY MOORE, the Librarian, read a list of contributions of more than ordinary importance, sent to the Society since its last meeting. Among them were a camp bedstead, used by Gen. WASHINGTON in the Revolutionary War, presented by E. D. MCCRACKEN; "Jacob's Dream," a splendid picture by TERRY, presented under the will of the late Mrs. RIKERS; a valuable collection of documents relative to the Society of the Cincinnati, and many other valuable gifts. Affecting allusion was made to the sad decease of the late THOMAS or BUCKINGHAM SMITH, who was taken insensible to Bellevue Hospital recently, and left to die alone there. Mr. SMITH had been a member of the Society for many years, but for some years consumption had been undermining his constitution.

The paper of the evening, contributed by Mrs. MARTHA J. LAMB, on Mrs. EDWARD LIVINGSTON, was read by Mr. MOORE. The large audience was somewhat disappointed that the lady did not read it herself. It was an interesting paper, and was received with applause.

A Warning to Burglars—New-Jersey Justice.

A few weeks ago, Capt. PIERCE, of the Fourth Police Precinct of Jersey City, unearthed a trio of burglars in an unoccupied house in the former City of Bergen, which they had selected as a receptacle for their booty as well as a temporary refuge. A large quantity of clothing and silver-ware was found in the building. Most of the articles were identified by the people in the neighborhood, to whom they belonged, and whose dwellings were frequently plundered by the young marauders. The leader of the party was a white man, named JOHN WALSH, and his accomplices were two young colored men, named JOHN H. MORRIS and WILLIAM JACKSON. WALSH was convicted yesterday afternoon, in the Hudson County Court, on three indictments, charging him with burglary, and sentenced to the State Prison for fifteen years. JACKSON pleaded guilty to burglary and grand larceny, and was sentenced to the State Prison for eleven years, while MORRIS was adjudged guilty of burglary, and sentenced to four years in the State Prison.

ALBANY.

A Crew of Canal Choice Mills—Railroad Commissioners of Towns—Vote—Erie—The Delaware and Hudson Canal—Miscellaneous.

From Our Own Correspondent.

ALBANY, Tuesday, March 7, 1871.

There are no rumors of heavy legislation this week, although it is at times when expectation waits upon doubt that the largest jobs are put upon the carpet and the most outrageous swindles imposed upon the people. It is not always that a single bill, no matter how important, is the centre of so great interest as are these little matters, one of which is put out as a feeler, and upon its success is hinged a vast number of similar acts, which, when found in order and brought before the gates of the treasury, give that venerable receptacle a shudder, if not a collapse. Of this latter class is the new style of claim bills that, originating a year ago, have this year grown into the honorable position of classes. These bills ask that whenever a contractor has, through carelessness, put his bid at a figure too low to pay, the State shall come forward and relieve him. The Constitution expressly states that work shall be let to the lowest bidder. Can it be possible that a Democratic Legislature imagines that among the reserved rights of that belaued document is one for the benefit of the Canal Ring, who have squandered the revenues of the canal for years? The number of these bills is so great that they can and do afford a large lobby, and they are entering wedges that will make quick work with the tax-payers.

RAILROADS.

An interesting bill was passed in the Senate, relating to the appointment of Railroad Commissioners in the towns that have bonded themselves. There are three commissioners in each town; if one dies the power to appoint in his place lies with the two surviving. Of course they will not act, their power being increased by the vacancy. This bill gives the power of appointment to the County Judge. Some time ago an endeavor was made to take the power entirely away from the County Judge and give it to the people at an election to be held for the purpose. On its face it would seem just that the tax-payers should select their own representatives, but such a bill, in fact, places the interests of the many large roads in the State in the hands of ward politicians. That proposition was vigorously opposed by Mr. LITTLEJOHN, and is dead. The present bill would seem to be fastening the doors against any possible interference by the people.

VETO.

This morning, the Senate was the recipient of another of the favorite paper balls of his Excellency. One would think that he was a great admirer of SHAKESPEARE, improved, and opened his eyes each morning with the somewhat stale soliloquy of "To veto, or not to veto." It is probably useless to say that he generally votes in the affirmative. The bill that was this morning the unfortunate subject of his cogitations was the improved Game law of the State. Some time in January a committee from the State Sportsman's Association met in this city, and, after several days' labor, agreed upon a bill that contained their wishes, and would be satisfactory to their Association. The bill came before the Legislature, and was considered, very extensively altered, and passed. Now the mighty lranter of the Commonwealth brings it down, and his friends tell us that the members reasted it, the Senators boiled it, and that he, as a co-ordinate branch of the Government, had his privilege of cooking it. If the sportsmen are satisfied, it is all as it should be; but it seems singular, after their protracted session, that they should rejoice over the failure of their whilom pet.

ERIE.

The friends of the Erie bill are to have a hearing before the House Committee at 2½ o'clock on Wednesday afternoon. There seems to be great secrecy anent the matter, and who is to be here, or to what extent the redoubtable FISK and his friends are to put up, is surrounded by mystery. As a commentary upon the slow action of the House, it may be stated that this morning Senator LEWIS introduced a bill to oblige the retirement of the entire Board of Directors at each election. The Senator knows not from whence it came or what it means; it may be the first move of some disappointed lobbyman who thinks he has not been properly attended to.

DELAWARE AND HUDSON CANAL COMPANY.

This great corporation has come under legislative supervision at last. A bill was introduced some time ago by Mr. CAREY to repeal the second section of the law of 1867, which gives to this corporation the power to buy, lease and build railroads in any portion of the State without filing any papers, as by the General Railroad act all companies are obliged, in the office of the Secretary of State. This was a blow at a very valuable franchise, but as it merely destroyed an adjunct to their power, it was not treated with much consideration by the Company. This action was properly appreciated, and on Friday Mr. IRVING presented a new bill that repeals all laws relating to the Company, and practically eliminates them from all rights under the laws of the State. This bill has done its work, and now anxiety takes the place of assurance, and the great corporation trembles, before the bold law-maker! It is understood that some of the great railroad corporations are acting in the matter, and when we remember that the Hudson Company now own the Susquehanna Road, for whose possession the Erie fought so long and well, we shall probably not be far wrong if we give them the credit of the move.

HOUSES OF REFUGE, &c.

Mr. GOODRICH will introduce a bill at an early day to relieve juvenile delinquents from the disqualification to testify, created by section 39, title 7, chapter 1, part 4, of the Revised Statutes, and the prohibition to vote at any election by section 15, chapter 240, of the laws of 1847. As the law is now construed by the Court of Appeals, in the case of The People vs. PECK, the persons discharged from the houses of refuge and reformatories of the State are under the same disqualifications as persons who are confined in the State Prisons for a similar offense. Under this construction the beneficial power of the reformation is entirely destroyed, since the chief object of these institutions is to eliminate the evil from the minds of the inmates and then to place them back in society in a position to forget their early crimes. This has been the effect of their training in these institutions up to this time, but under the late decision the entire scope of beneficial action is destroyed. Unless a bill of this character is passed, it is hardly worth while to proceed with the appropriation of three hundred thousand dollars for the new Reformatory Prison.

THE SENATE GRINDING COMMITTEE.

On this Committee, appointed today, the Republicans are given three members. A resolution was adopted allowing any Senator who was unable to attend on account of sickness, the power to appoint a substitute. This is something new, and since Senators MURPHY and C. F. MORTON are complaining, it is probably wise action. The Committee is as follows: Tweed, M. Norton, Murphy, Banks, C. F. Norton, Kennedy, Hubbard, Woodin, Scott. Of course the fat Senator from New-York will do heavy work at the head of the body, and if there are any that dare object to his ponderous activity, he will probably do a little extra work and finish the Senator, before he destroys the bill.

WESTCHESTER ANNEXATION.

The question most frequently asked by certain parties in this connection is, "How much land has been bought on account of the scheme?" The duties of the Legislature have evidently interfered with the proper attention to this matter, and now, despite the anxiety of a large number of residents of both New-York and Westchester, the bill goes over. The new bill to limit the tax in the City of New-York to two per cent. was interesting to a majority of the countrymen, until they were told that the valuation in the County of New-York was something very different from the thirty-five per cent. in their own county. Fully understanding this, the feeling in favor of the bill backed away, and the Yonkers and other men concluded that their own taxation of 2.35 was preferable to the evils of two per cent. and New-York assessors. Another year will, however, make the necessary changes, and the New-York Ring, having properly thrown which to run new avenues, and ponds of pure water to sell, will go in vigorously for this measure or for either Broadway widening or the Water bill. Pneumatic Legislation—Scrip and the Benevolent Steward—Brooklyn Police Par—A Predatory Band from New-York.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

ALBANY, March 7.—The report of the Pneumatic Railroad bill, this morning, was something of a surprise, so dead was it considered. But when it was fully understood, it created no alarm among the friends of the other projects. It means that the Railroad Committee have concluded that no business will be done if they are to be hampered by the numerous underground projects of New-York, and they therefore prefer to report the bills as soon as they can fairly consider them, and let the members decide upon their merits. The Governor has shown himself so apt at vetoing this kind of bills, that all danger from party legislation is done away.

LOUIS BONARD'S PROPERTY.

Mr. BERGH is on hand to obtain power to enable him to get possession of LOUIS BONARD'S estate, and a bill to assist him was this evening passed in the Senate.

THE BROOKLYN POLICE.

The consideration of the Brooklyn Police bill led to a bitter fight among the members from that city. JACOBS, backed by a petition from a majority of the tax-payers, demanded that the salaries should be increased, while the rest of the delegation, except Mr. ROCHE, objected. The debate was long and fretful, but after a time, with the assistance of Mr. HUSTED, the amendment to raise the pay of patrolmen from $1,000 to $1,200 was adopted.

LOOKING FOR SPOILS.

A large delegation of the Young Democracy are on hand, looking for the salaries of the officials who were last year legislated out of office by the new charter. TWEED and SWEENY are understood to be canvassing on the subject, and it is probable that the gross sum will be smuggled into the Tax Levy. The large diamonds and generally prosperous condition of interested parties have given new hopes to the members, and things are looking better than before.

AN INTERESTING ARGUMENT.

The Estate of Harry I. Spotts, Late of the St. Nicholas Hotel—Proceedings Before the Surrogate Yesterday—How the Firm of Spotts & Hawk Originated—The Profits of a Successful Public House.

An interesting argument was made before Surrogate HUTCHINGS yesterday in the matter of the estate of HARRY I. SPOTTS, deceased, a case which has engaged the attention of the Court at intervals during the last eight years. Briefly stated it is as follows: HARRY I. SPOTTS was a steam-boat Captain on the Ohio River, and in the year 1865 was supposed to be bankrupt in fortune. The St. Nicholas Hotel in this City had proved unprofitable to the then proprietors. But early in 1869 SPOTTS came to New-York, and forming a copartnership, in which he had a one-third interest, with Messrs. HAWK, HAIGHT & LOUBAT, (who are proprietors at present,) under the firm name of SPOTTS & HAWK, entered upon a career, which, starting on borrowed capital, resulted in a fortune of nearly or quite half a million of dollars for SPOTTS' estate. The articles of copartnership between SPOTTS & HAWK were entered into in January, 1863, and provided that it should continue for five years, or until February, 1868, and that in the event of the death of either of the partners a suitable person should be employed to discharge the required duties at a salary fixed, and payable from the profits or share of the profits accruing to the estate of the deceased, but that the person so employed should have no interest other than his salary. SPOTTS died in March, 1864, intestate. Letters of administration were issued to his widow, Mrs. JANE P. SPOTTS and HENRY A. DUMESNIL, in April 23, 1864. The then value of the estate was appraised at $20,000. At the end of July, 1869, DUMESNIL, by reason of his removal to Kentucky and refusal to furnish additional sureties on his administration bond, ceased to be administrator, and the widow became the sole administratrix, at which time, worth nearly $300,000. Mrs. SPOTTS has never made her final accounting—although she has been cited to do so by the Surrogate, and an attachment has issued to compel her to do so. She has removed from this State and cannot be reached by the Surrogate's orders. In December, 1869, DUMESNIL filed his final accounting in the Surrogate's Court, and asked for a formal discharge from further responsibility. The accounts, as died were objected to, and were referred to A. A. RENDFIELD, Esq., as auditor; frequent hearings were had before him, and his report was filed in the Surrogate's Court in January, 1871. Exceptions to the report were also filed, and two motions with regard to them were yesterday argued. First, to sustain the exceptions; second, to confirm the auditor's report, the exceptions notwithstanding.

The arguments turned upon the nature and validity of a certain agreement between Mrs. SPOTTS and Mr. DUMESNIL, made April 1, 1865, but not formally executed until May 1, 1865. Under that agreement DUMESNIL agreed to serve as administrator and to procure sureties to a bond upon which to procure her appointment to be administratrix, and thus keep the estate out of the hands of the public administrator. Mrs. SPOTTS was to receive, under this agreement, certain personal property, and also was to pay him a portion of the net profits of the hotel business which should come to her as her widow's share—if the business proved profitable, and there should be any distributive share to be paid over to her as widow. Until September, 1865, DUMESNIL had active management of the affairs, and no moneys of the estate were used without his order for that time. Thereafter Mrs. SPOTTS had charge of all the moneys and property, and used it on her own responsibility, without consulting him. In March, 1868, it was apparent that there would be a large widow's portion—and DUMESNIL and Mrs. SPOTTS then had a settlement to date, under which a payment of several thousand dollars was made by her to him. It is now charged by the contestants that that money came out of the estate—that DUMESNIL had no right so to take it by reason of the fact that he was then sustaining the relation of a trustee to the estate, and that DUMESNIL must not only pay the money over to the estate. To these facts the administratrix replies that he did not receive the amount as administrator or from the estate, but as a private payment of a personal obligation to him by Mrs. SPOTTS, as widow, and not be administratrix, under an agreement made before the administration was established; that he did not take the money out of the estate, and did not know at the time where it came from, and that it should be mentioned in his accounting at all, it should be stated as a sum which Mrs. SPOTTS, as administratrix, may have taken out of the estate and advanced to herself as on account of her distributive share as widow, and which she, as widow, owed to pay her private debts; that though DUMESNIL had nothing to do with her taking the money out of the estate, still, as he was administrator at the time, and seemed to have done nothing to prevent her from taking it, he might, perhaps, be held liable to refund it, or a part of it, if it had turned out that there was no widow's share, or a share of an amount less than the amount of that advance; but that as it is, there is a widow's share, large enough, and this sum must be credited to the estate as a payment of a part of it.

The following counsel are engaged in the case: For the administrator, BURTON S. HARRISON, Esq.; for Mrs. SPOTTS and her children, Mr. JOSEPH H. DUKES, and for the United States Trust Company, guardian of the estate of the infant children, FLAMAN B. CANDLER, Esq. The Surrogate reserved his decision.

Thrice Married and Once a Widow—The Jackson Will Case.

The case of MOSES W. S. JACKSON against ANNA MARGARET JACKSON, DAVID S. JACKSON and FRANCIS P. MILLER, came up for trial before a jury in the Supreme Court, Part II., yesterday, Judge VAN BRUNT presiding. The action is to set aside the will of MOSES W. S. JACKSON, made in favor of his widow, ANNA MARGARET JACKSON, one of the defendants. The facts of the case, which, however, has probably been already published in the TIMES, and may be briefly recapitulated as follows: About the year 1842 the testator, Mr. JACKSON, married a Miss FARRAND, then a school girl of about fifteen years of age. The new-made bride continued at school for six weeks, and then moved to a small house in West Thirty-second-street, New-York, which Mr. JACKSON had furnished and furnished. Through the influence of her mother, this Mrs. JACKSON separated from the deceased in about two months after their marriage, but became reconciled, and they managed to live together until 1846, or a period of three years, when there arose the fatal quarrel and Mrs. JACKSON left, never to return. After the separation, about 1849, Mr. JACKSON made the acquaintance of the present Mrs. JACKSON, the daughter of a German named SCHNAUFFER, then about sixteen years of age, whom, without obtaining a divorce from the first wife, Mr. JACKSON about this time married. In 1857 the first wife obtained a divorce from Mr. JACKSON, alleging adultery with various persons and after such divorce JACKSON again married his present widow. Subsequently the first Mrs. JACKSON died, and immediately before his death Mr. JACKSON again insisted on having the ceremony of marriage with the second Mrs. JACKSON performed for the third time, he at the same time making his will, which is the subject of the present litigation, in favor of his widow, the defendant. The contestant is the son of the first wife, and was born in 1847, and claims that he is the legal heir of the deceased, and will be entitled to inherit his property if the will is set aside for informality.

Extensive Burglary in Broome-Street.

During Monday night a party of burglars entered the hatters' furnishing warehouse of J. H. FROST & CO., No. 464 Broome-street, forcing off an iron shutter from one of the rear windows, through which they effected an entrance. They thoroughly ransacked the premises, and carried away silk linings and other goods to the value of $4,000, with which they left the premises without being seen. The burglary was discovered before daylight by Officer BELL of the Eighth Precinct, and the thieves was secured against further depredations, but as that time no trace of the burglars or goods was found. At 5 o'clock, however, Officer SETON, of the same precinct, found a large lot of goods stowed away in the out-house of No. 60 Greene-street, which proved to be those purloined from FROST & CO., to whom they were restored. It is supposed that the thieves had concealed them where they were found, to await a favorable opportunity for removal, which had not presented itself when they were discovered by the Police.

The Old Colony Case—Discharge of Capt. Grindle—Extraordinary Verdict.

The trial of Capt. GRINDLE, of the ship Old Colony, on a charge of cruel and unusual treatment, preferred against him by RAYMOND RAUD and FRANCO FRANC, during a voyage from Cadizzo New-York, in November last, was resumed yesterday in the United States Court, before Judge WOODRUFF. Some additional evidence was given on the part of the defense, establishing Capt. GRINDLE's invariably kind treatment of his seamen, and then Ex-Judge FULLERTON addressed the jury on the part of the prisoner. He strongly denied that his client had been guilty of any cruel or harsh treatment of his sailors. The evidence of those most intimate with him, he said, disproved it, and RAUD's lazyness and habitual desertion of his post, particularly on the occasion when he left the look-out, would have justified him in confining and punishing him. Assistant District-Attorney DAVIS followed on the part of the Government, and then Judge WOODRUFF proceeded to deliver the charge to the jury. After an exhaustive review of the facts in evidence, he pointed out the statutes governing the case, and said that, taking the surrounding circumstances into the account—the alleged apprehension of the prisoner of the burning of his vessel if RAU were set at large, his frequent desertion of duty, &c.—they should be satisfied that there were no grounds for these apprehensions, and the infliction of the alleged cruelties, before the prisoner could be found guilty. The jury retired, and, after an hour's consideration, returned the verdict that the prisoner was "not guilty, under the statute and ruling, but guilty of cruelty." Judge WOODRUFF said that verdict should be accepted as "not guilty," and the jury formally returned a verdict of acquittal. The prisoner was then released.

THE FOURTH WARD MYSTERY.

Commencement of the Inquest by Coroner Keenan—Statements of the Dead Man's Companions.

Coroner KEENAN commenced an inquest yesterday in the case of PATRICK MURPHY, the young man who met his death on Sunday morning under peculiar and suspicious circumstances, as already reported in these columns. The following evidence was elicited:

MRS. CATHARINE MURPHY, of No. 113 Henry-street, testified that the deceased was a machinist and her son; he left home on Saturday evening, and the next morning she was informed of his death.

MATHEW HANLON, of No. 371 East Eighth-street, testified that he was introduced to the deceased about one and a half o'clock on Sunday morning by WM. DALY. He and DALY met MURPHY and several other young men at the corner of Orchard and Hester streets; as DALY found that MURPHY was intoxicated he proposed to witness that they take him home; as the latter consented, they left the Murphy party and proceeded with him toward Cherry-street, where they thought he lived; as the corner of Cherry and Oxford'as all three began to sing, and walked toward Madison-street, at which point they saw two policemen on the Seventh Ward side; one of the officers called out to "stop that d—d noise;" at East Broadway they began to sing again, and saw another officer on the Fourth Ward side, between Division-street and East Broadway, who also told them to stop singing; deceased the left walked across the street toward the officer in spite of the efforts of his companions, and struggled down the street on that side; the officer gave MURPHY a poke in the back with his club and ordered him to move on, though he did not seem to hurt him; the officer and the deceased then exchanged some angry words, and witness believed MURPHY must have entered some insulting remark, for he immediately ran across the street toward witness, and DALY, being pursued by the officer, who struck him on the back with his club two or three times; deceased fell on the sidewalk; witness could not say whether his head struck the pavement or not; the officer caught hold of deceased and rapped for assistance; the witness and DALY then ran away; several more officers came up in response to the alarm raps, and all seized deceased, as he was struggling with the first one, and was repeating "Let me go home;" the four officers then dragged him along the sidewalk, MURPHY all this time resisting; witness followed, about half a block distant; when the policemen got as far as Madison-street they laid MURPHY down, and getting a wagon carried him to the Station-house in Pearl-street; witness went in also, and saw deceased lying on the floor; as doctor who had been summoned examined him and said he was dead; there was a large crowd near the Police when they dragged MURPHY on the sidewalk, and they cried "Shame, shame!"

WM. DALY, of No. 709 East Fifth-street, testified that when the deceased ran across the street he heard him use indecent language to the officer, who told him to keep quiet; did not see the officer strike MURPHY, but heard him exclaim, "Oh, my back." The remainder of the testimony corroborated that given by HANLON.

The Coroner announced that he would adjourn the case until Friday, as the relatives of the deceased wished to attend the funeral. He stated also that if any person who had seen the officers dragging the deceased as aforesaid by the wristbands, would report on Friday, he would be much obliged to them, as any outside evidence would be valuable. Justice DOWLING, in the Essex Market Police Courts, convicted ABRAHAM COAKLEY and MARTIN BROODRICK of an assault upon Officer CRAIG, of the Fourth Ward Police. These men were understood to be witnesses against the officers who brought MURPHY into the Station-house. They were sentenced to the Penitentiary for six months each.

WHO SHALL BE HEIR?

The Hogan Will Case—The Testimony for the Plaintiff Reviewed.

In this case counsel for the plaintiff, Mrs. HATCH, submitted their propositions of law to the Court, and in conjunction therewith, Mr. STOUGHTON reviewed the testimony given in the case. As tending to show undue influence exercised over Mrs. HOGAN by the defendant, Mrs. PEUGNET, he dwelt forcibly on the fact that Mrs. HOGAN had repeatedly spoken of both her daughters with equal respect and affection even up to the hour of her death; that Mrs. HATCH and her mother had met at the Convent, after the first misunderstanding between the sisters; that their meeting was most cordial; that they occupied the same bed that night; that in sending presents to plaintiff, deceased was most careful to conceal the fact from the defendant; that she had expressed herself to others that all her daughters would share in her property, but that defendant would get the most; that the will was made for the attorney of defendant's husband, who had never been known to deceased, and so far as had been shown, without a word of instruction from her; that the letter which accompanied that will had not been produced, and that the deed was subsequently made, as he would claim, to obviate any question that might arise about the validity of the will. Mr. STOUGHTON adverted also to the fact that the husband of defendant was the attending physician of the deceased; that two days before her death he stated to plaintiff that it was not necessary to send for a notary man, and the very next morning a physician was called in, and deceased had received all the sacraments and was prepared for her end. The very relation which existed between the husband of defendant and the deceased, as physician and patient, when the deed was made, sweeping all the property into the possession of the physician's wife, was sufficient, counsel contended, to make the conveyance void by operation of law.

The case will be continued today, when Mr. GRAHAM will present points on behalf of defendant.

The Purim Festival.

All the Jewish world is now celebrating the feast of Purim. It commenced on Saturday evening last, and was appropriately observed in all the synagogues in this City, by the Reformed and Orthodox Israelites. The services were mainly jubilant and commemorative, and the Rabbi's delivered discourses upon the topic of the day. The feast was established 2,300 years ago, on the Fourteenth of the Month Adar, in the Jewish calendar. In the Book of Esther, ninth chapter, is found the sacred record of the occasion, which is principally dwelt upon during all the various days' ceremonials. Esther, the pure and beautiful Queen of the great King Ahasuerus, by the aid of her Kinsman, Mordecai, baffled the designs of the corrupt Premier Haman, who would have annihilated her people. She secured their deliverance, caused the execution of Haman, and the succession of Mordecai to the Premiership. The ecclesiastical commemorations, however, are but a part of the jubilee of this festivity. All the Jewish people have a variety of social merry-makings. Balls, parties, masquerades, and tableaux as well as charitable and friendly acts, mark the Purim period. The number, variety and magnificence of many of these entertainments indicate the extent, influence and wealth of our Jewish population. It is a striking fact that notwithstanding the centuries of persecution and numerous attempts by fire, blood and sword to exterminate the ancient Hebrew race, they still live, and thrive. At all the Hebrew benevolent institutions yesterday receptions were given and largely attended. Handsome contributions were made in each instance. The Asylum for the Aged and Infirm, the Orphans' Home, the Industrial Home in West Seventeenth-street, and the charitable schools, were scenes of rejoicing and festivity—both the inmates and visitors heartily participating.

Vessel-Owners' and Captains' Association—Petition Against Quarantine Laws.

At the regular meeting of the Vessel-Owners' and Captains' Association, yesterday, at their rooms, No. 49 Pine-street, Mr. J. A. VAN DUZER presiding, the following petition was adopted for presentation to the Legislature:

To the Honorable Senate and Assembly of the State of New-York:

We the undersigned masters and owners of sail vessels engaged in the coasting trade of the United States, would most respectfully petition your honorable body to amend the Quarantine laws of the State of New-York by striking out "Cape Henlopen," and substituting "Cape Henry," in Section 9, clause 2, which now reads "From any place (including islands) in Africa, Asia or the Mediterranean, from any of the West Indies, Bahama, Bermuda, or Western Islands, or from any place in America, in the ordinary trading route to which they pass south of Cape Henlopen, and all vessels on board of which, during the voyage, or while at the port of their departure, any person shall have been sick, arriving between the 1st day of May and the 1st day of November, and all vessels from a foreign port not embraced in the first section of this section, shall, on their arrival at the Quarantine ground, be subject to visitation by the Health Officer," &c.

And we would most respectfully represent that our vessels are engaged during the Summer months in freighting coal from Baltimore, Alexandria, Georgetown, D. C., and Richmond, Va., and wood and lumber from the James, York, Rappahannock and Potomac Rivers, and the tributaries of the Chesapeake Bay, and very many of our vessels are compelled to anchor in the Lower Bay, and in case of sickness on board of the passengers and the more valuable freight being shipped and carried by railroad, cannot be reached by the Quarantine Physician, and we should honorably discharge the prisoners. Capt. PEABODY and his mate were then released from custody.

REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS.

The only sales made at the Exchange, yesterday, (March 7,) were effected by MULLER, WILKINS & CO., as follows: By order of the executors of THOS. H. LEGGETT, deceased, three four-story brick stores and lots, located on the north side of Pearl-street, between Beekman and Ferry streets, and known as Nos. 208, 205½ and 207, sold together and purchased by J. AGATE, of Yonkers, for $26,300, a low price, as the property rents at the rate of $4,900 per annum. The dimensions of the lots, &c., are given below. By order of the executors of Mrs. JEANETTE FERGUSON, deceased, Mr. MULLER next sold a brown-stone front house and lot, 20x100.4, on the south side of West Forty-sixth-street, between Broadway and Eighth avenue, known as No. 218, for $21,850; bought by O. ZOLLIKOFFER. The last sale made, one at public auction, was of the premises situated on the north-east corner of Maiden-lane and Water-street, comprising a six-story brick store and lot, 20.6x30.8, No. 185 Maiden-lane and No. 185 Water-street. The property was sold to SAMUEL S. CONSTANT for $17,000. The sums realized for each of the three last-named pieces of real estate were considered low. Messrs. MULLER & CO. also offered at auction a four-story brown-stone front house and lot on the north side of East Fourteenth-street, between First and Second avenues, known as No. 237, but no bids being received the property was withdrawn.

The only other transaction attempted yesterday was by A. J. BLEECKER, JR. & BRO., and H. J. & BROTHER, O. H. PURDON, auctioneer, of a house, barn and six lots of land, at Granton, N. J., located on the Hackensack and Hoboken Turnpike, about five miles from Hoboken Ferry. The premises were nominally sold to Mr. BOGART for $1,700. The following adjournments of legal sales closed the business of the day: By D. T. VALENTINE, Esq., Sheriff, to March 16, the south side of Allen-street, 25 feet 1 inch south of Stanton-street, adjourned to March 14. By LAWRENCE, OAKLEY & FLEURY, sale of a lot on the east side of Lexington-avenue, between Forty-fourth and Forty-fifth streets, adjourned to March 16. By ROBERTS & MCGUIRE, sale of six lots on the north-east corner of Seventh avenue and Ninety-third-street, mentioned to March 22.

For today, at the Exchange, the principal sale announced is that by WM. KENNELLY, embracing the disposition, at an executor's sale, of the valuable business premises known respectively as No. 24 Beekman and No. 16 Spruce-street, near Nassau. The lots adjoin each other in the rear, and together are 100 feet 9 inches in depth, having a front on Spruce-street of 25 feet 8 inches, and on Beekman-street of 50 feet. Upon each lot is a five-story brick warehouse in erection. The location for business purposes is a desirable one. Mr. KENNELLY will also offer for sale the four-story warehouse and lot known as No. 82 Water-street, near the Cotton Exchange, and six full-sized building lots on Sixty-eighth-street, between Eighth and Ninth avenues. The proposed sales are all important ones.

In the matter of property offered at private sale, lots of City houses and lots worthy of note, are advertised by WARD & OGDEN, Broadway, corner Seventeenth-street, FRANK G. & DAVISON BROWN, No. 100 Broadway, V. K. STEVENSON & SON, No. 11 Pine-street, and HUGH N. CAMP, No. 31 Pine-street. Attention is also called to the fine number of residence lots of City and country property offered at private sale, as published in our business columns.

WILLIAM TUCKER, real estate broker, No. 236 Fifth-avenue, reports having recently sold the four-story brown-stone front house and lot No. 8 East Forty-ninth-street, for $82,500.

PREACHERS FOR THE PEOPLE

The Mode of Training Missionaries to the Masses.

Meeting in Behalf of the House of the Evangelists—How to Reach the Masses With the Gospel—Addresses by Rev. S. H. Tyng, Jr., Rev. Henry Ward Beecher, Rev. Dr. Stowe, and Rev. Dr. Tyng.

Association Hall was crowded, last evening, with an audience who showed their sympathy with the object of the House of the Evangelists, in whose behalf they had met together. Mr. JAMES M. BROWN presided, and the services were opened by singing, after which Rev. Dr. MUHLENBURG offered prayer. Rev. S. H. TYNG, Jr., under whose auspices and that of his church the institution has been founded and sustained hitherto, then made substantially the following statement:

STATEMENT OF MR. TYNG.

The House of the Evangelists is an institution for the theological and practical training of young men for effective lay and clerical labor among the neglected in large cities and communities. The theological seminaries of the country are not graduating a sufficient number of men to supply the established churches, and consequently furnish no surplus for distinctively mission work. And if they did graduate a sufficient number, they do not and cannot furnish a ministry adapted to approach the people on the side of common experiences, tastes and prejudices, benevolence, brotherhood. While all seminaries bemoan a deficiency in the numbers of candidates for whose education they have sufficient endowments, professors, buildings, &c., there is a large class of young men ready and anxious to enter upon this special work among the people. More than three years ago it was determined by the rector of the Church of the Holy Trinity to attempt the organization and instruction of a class of young men willing to accept and consecrate themselves to this particular sphere of work. For two years, with the aid of several clergymen, five young men were so taught. Three of these are now in active mission work, and vindicate the wisdom of the effort and the adaptedness of the methods then accepted. Two others are now in the seminary of the South. After such a trial of the principles and the attainment of such experience, it was in January, 1870, determined to give the effort an organized shape. An act of incorporation was secured, a house was rented, and appliances for boarding and instructing ten students were procured. The object of the House is to furnish the Church with a body of skilled lay and clerical missionaries to preach to the masses. The English Bible is the chief text book. Hebrew is not taught. Greek is taught to those who are able and desirous to pursue its study. Practical theology takes the place of polemic and dogmatic, with especial reference to the gross materialism and positive indifferentism of the non-church-going masses. Especial training in actual mission work, instruction in the mode of conducting mission services, Sunday schools, pastoral visitation, &c., are also given. These principles are wrought out in the formation of right habits by constant labor. Chapels and schools are conducted by them. Ten thousand visits, besides the exacting influence upon their own spirituality and efficiency, manifest that a real amount of actual results. Let the educational side be ignored; we claim that the House is vindicated as a most economical agency in actual mission work. We are ready to furnish any Church or any denomination with missionaries.

The administration of the institution was confided to gentlemen for the most part connected with the Church of the Holy Trinity. It is not proposed to change this basis, which secures a direct and impelling sense of responsibility; a continuous and pastoral supervision; an unfluctuating constituency, and a source of pecuniary supply. These considerations have been proved to be well conceived by the year's experience. To the Church of the Episcopal Church has peculiar facilities for analyzing principles and administration; the evangelical principles of the Church of the Holy Trinity, which is shared in common with all the evangelical Churches, happily to that spiritual fitness for unwavering motive, the engraving of the old pastoral method of training students for the ministry upon the later and more seminary instructions, secures the advantages of both plans to young men, who peculiarly need the advantages to be derived from both. Two possible lines of development open before the House in the future. The Board have no preferences. They are willing to be governed by providential indications. The enlargement of the number of students and the creation of a general institution occupying that exclusive basis which is accepted by every theological seminary—while Episcopal and parochial in name, are still theological seminaries of the best kind, and will there ever be a time when the admission and graduation of any young man qualified for the special work among the masses is impertinent. The reproduction of this as a type institution in connection with other influential parishes. There are a great many parishes in all our large cities, which, perhaps, may be satisfied of the expediency, and are certainly competent to furnish the support of such an institution. If the future has this in store, then the actual work of this House must be limited by the ability and interest of the church to which it is attached. Whichever of these two developments are before us, so long as this is the only institution in this City and throughout the country for the training of such missionary agents—since the privileges of the House are restricted by no sectarian tests, the Board feel that they can with propriety invite the co-operation in its plans of all who have an ear for the cry of neglected souls and an interest in the solution of the great social problems of the age.

ADDRESS OF MR. BEECHER.

Rev. HENRY WARD BEECHER was then introduced and spoke as follows:

Mr. BEECHER said: I apprehend it is not a question to be discussed here tonight whether the ideal ministry should be a highly educated ministry. That is a conclusion to which, after a long series of experiences, almost the whole Christian world, represented in its different denominations, has come; and I do not propose to controvert it. On the other hand I would say to every young man preparing for the ministry—you can't prepare too much—you can't know too much. That which the seminary gives to you if you take it right will make your work easier, will make you more fruitful and will make you a larger worker in the field than you possibly could have been in any other way." I bear witness that to this hour I recognise, and with gratitude, the benefit to me of the exercises through which I was put in the seminary before I was taught theological science. I would absolute nothing from the ideal culture, provided it be right culture, such as in the main our seminaries afford better culture than was got in the old times; better than that which was obtained when the parish was the seminary and the pastor the whole professorship—that is, taking the number, and taking every side of the work, and yet our seminaries and they that talk, would be the first to declare their conscientious feeling that there is something more yet needed. While they were yet bringing up men, and very nobly, with many sides of preparation there is a certain want of warmth, of freshness and of life which comes from want of contact with the community, man with man, that is felt as much by the professors as by those who criticise and make it their study; if in any way it can be done to remedy it. There needs to be, to meet the wants of the age, men equipped in every way, and I do not suppose a man is necessarily a better minister of the Gospel because he has spent years and years in the accumulation of a more scholastic fund of knowledge. I don't suppose that if a man allows himself to be run away with by æsthetic ideas, and has been polishing and polishing himself until he becomes an exquisite dialectician and a most superb manager of sentences, and can play at words with the finest grace—I don't think that that kind of man will be a better minister. There are many men of poor intellect who have been educated just in that way—as JOHN RANDOLPH said to a person who was boasting he had been educated in Glasgow, and was better fitted to represent the constituency in Congress than RANDOLPH, he replied: "I think a man may be reminded of the lands at the head-waters of the Monongahela; they were very poor by nature, and cultivation entirely exhausted them. [Laughter.] Now and then in a shallow soil, I have seen the same operation upon persons in the seminaries. Too much educated; that is, not enough stamina enough to bear it; but in general, I think, all thoughtful men are agreed that the standard of education for the ministry ought not to be brought down; that we should hold what we have, and raise it still higher, so that there is no question, I suppose, of this kind to be raised. The question is whether, while we are doing this, we can supply all the men so equipped that the work. It is just as when the war broke out in this land, there was no doubt that the educated officer was the best officer; but we could not wait, with the war on our hands, until West Point gave us the officers we wanted, and we took men from civil life. They did not equal West Point men. There has not been more than one or two men who rose from civil life to any eminence, any considerable success in the command of armies. West Point and a regular education for the profession of arms was vindicated by the great conflict more than anything else that has taken place in our day. Nevertheless, the exigencies of the war required that we should take second-rate, third-rate and fourth-rate officers, and we found them in multitudes in the rank down. The whole country was in arms, and it was life or death with us; we had to take them not because it was the best reality, but because it was the best we could get under the circumstances. Now look at the community. What part of the population of New-York and Brooklyn are gathered in your churches? Is half, is a quarter of the population of these great cities preached to, ministered to in any considerable degree? Have you the churches, have you the ministers? Are they not going down to death month by month and year by year, swarms and multitudes and no man to preach to them? We would preach to them by the best trained ministry in the world if we could, but not having them, and we are compelled to take the next best. I advocate, therefore, the education of ministers by a short cut, for that is the plain English in regard to the House of the Evangelists. It is making up men by a shorter process to preach the Gospel and administer its ordinances, or to perform the field work of the ministry. Look at the state of the country. It is said one-half of the churches, taking all denominations together throughout the United States, are without pastors; that in other words, there are two churches to every minister. But consider how small a part of the population is included in churches. I do not mean in the more favored parishes in the rural districts, but in the cities of the country between the two oceans and between the lakes and the gulf, and how small a part is gathered? Not half have a regular minister, and the disproportion is growing, for the distinctive peculiarity of our time in this country is augmentation of population. We are like the quick-growing boys of poor parents who grow faster than the parents can buy clothes, and in consequence the pantaloons are gone and the arms are outgrowing the clothes. Our population is outgrowing the schools, the public seminaries, the theological institutions, and the churches. Look at the wave that is pouring westward. State after State, Territory after Territory is being formed and emigration from the inland States and the other side of the water is bearing in upon them. Everything has to be done—roads have to be made, fences have to be made, farms to be subjugated, all the primary elements of cultivation to be supplied. How little can they supply the higher wants of the population? Who shall take care of them? Shall barbarism first minister to them and Christianity creep slow-footed afterward to do the best it can? If we are going to keep pace with population and emigration and be in the front, we have got to have men, and where shall we get them? We don't get from our seminaries one-fiftieth of what we need, and shall we, from want of regular preparation, refuse to send men less cultured? Is not a half-cultured man better than no man at all? Is not a half loaf better than no bread? In times of plague or pestilence here you extemporize doctors, not that we cast any contempt on the regular profession, but where every house becomes a hospital, every nurse becomes a physician, and every human person with intelligence and experience prescribes; but when the pressure is removed we go back to our old doctors. We but meet the emergency by extemporizing professionals, and God gives his sanction to the act. What we want in this community and all the States throughout this nation, is that we shall meet this prodigious pressure, this enormous emergency, without waiting until we can make the best minister. We shall not get it with the best we can obtain, but we must have men who will preach Christ wherever there are souls born, and wherever there are souls dying. It is a shame to our Christianity if we leave one unvisited village or town on this continent where a soul wanting to know the way to heaven shall be unable to find it. A common feeling, if not an actually expressed objection, is that it will throw into the ministry an element that cannot help deteriorating it. Now what is this element? A part of those who will take the short cut to preaching will be young men who have not the means to educate themselves through a series of years, and I apprehend that in the long run experience will show that a great many men, twenty-five and thirty years of age, in the prime of life, who have been engaged in other callings, will find that they have a strong moral bias toward preaching. A great many merchants will find they have got into the wrong calling; a great many lawyers will find they will lead better with the gospel than with the law. A great many laymen of various callings will feel that their heart tells them they can preach the Gospel. Such men will come in through the House of Evangelists or like institutions. What are these men? Are they of a character that will tend to dilute the ministry? What is the distinctive peculiarity of this middle class from which these men will come? Common sense and practical business tact, and the men educated in the lawyer's offices, in the stores and in ordinary practical callings will be best fitted to the life of a preacher. The man that has not common sense ought not to be in the ministry nor anywhere else. [Laughter.] Assuming that if commonsense men in middle life brought in from their other occupations their business energy, it is just what the ministry is supposed to want. Common sense we respect in the common affairs of life. Yet I don't believe ministers are so simple and so unworldly-minded as not to know enough for their own good, and I should think they lisinging in of these men we are now calling for, will introduce a novel element into the ministry, and bring on sympathy with common people in a common way. It will be a positive gain to the ministry and make it stronger and not weaker. Now, about lowering the theology of the ministry, there is neither philosophy nor experience to justify such an inference as that. You may bring on a thousand half-educated men to preach the Gospel. There may be a thousand men preaching who have come through the House of the Evangelists, and a hundred men thoroughly disciplined in scholarship, with hearts warm and strong, and that one hundred men will lead the thousand. For in this life the ideal is that which always represents the most culture, and the most brains, and these that are half educated look up to these. It is not the top that takes its pattern from the bottom, but the bottom from the top. I go to the humble mechanic's house—see that he knows how the grandees live, and he is trying to fashion it after theirs—or, as he would have expressed it, after the house of the big-bugs. The poor men will look up to the rich, and try to live like them, according to their opportunity and their means. Who gives tone to society? The top layer of the educated society. Does it not set the fashion? Does it not control the educated sense of society demand it, and the uneducated adopt it. It was thoroughly illustrated in the example of the educated and accomplished officer—all the young officers adopt him as a pattern. Five hundred midshipmen, and every one wants to become a Farragut. Five hundred men go from the House of the Evangelists, but do you think they will suppose themselves smarter than Dr. TYNG? Do you think they will suppose they can do better work? No; they will look up the men; they will see the necessity of having the qualifications these educated men have, and the quick-educated men will always take their ideals from the top. The Methodist Church—one of the most excellent of all the descriptions of Episcopal Churches—were obliged to enter into the field with men such as they could get. Now if putting in such men would tend to pull the ministry down, they would have been forced down to a half-educated ministry, but what has been the tendency in that Church? The men who were educated on a horse-back—the members of the saddle ministry, as they were called in the West—have been contented with a little knowledge? Has the style of the Methodist ministry been deteriorating or going up? It is going up with such rapidity that in every city in the land there are noble specimens of thoroughly educated men in the Methodist ministry. It is the same in the Baptist churches, if I may be permitted to call them churches. I don't wish to hurt your feelings, Mr. Chairman. [Laughter.] The top will pull them up. All the ocean cannot put out the light of the sun, or extinguish the light of the moon. It is the sun and moon that lift the tides of the vast ocean. I say increase your seminaries, increase your endowments so that the professors may be able to teach a thousand where they now teach a hundred. Give more power to the regular ministry; but for Christ's sake, for man's sake for whom He died, and who are dying in their sins, don't refuse to have the Gospel preached to the millions who are going down without a ministry because you can't preach it by the voices of those who are regularly prepared. Let us have young men to call the nause of God over the dying body. Let them preach among the ignorant, let the name of Jesus so full of hope, so full of sweet sympathy, be sounded in dying ears, and as fast as you can bring in these sinners, these John the Baptists before the Church, fill up their places with regulars, but until you can, don't shut the door of invitation to any man that has the heart to preach Christ, and go into the field with patience and self-denial to do it. The reverend gentleman was frequently applauded during his address.

OTHER ADDRESSES.

Rev. Dr. HITCHCOCK being introduced, said he knew nothing about the institution. He took it on trust; but he did know that the seminaries do not turn out all the ministers needed by the Church, nor the kind most adapted to labor among the neglected masses. While advocating a thoroughly educated ministry, he urged more strongly the preaching of Christ to the masses by men who felt His power in their hearts, whether they be educated or not.

Dr. STOWE followed in a similar strain. He had often thought if we had fewer men in the world but of a better quality we could get along much easier. But finding the world as it is we must make it as good as we can, and without waiting for the slow process of college-taught ministers, he believed that any man possessing common sense and the love of Jesus in his heart was fit to teach and to lead others to the Savior. The war, he demonstrated the necessity for such a class of evangelists as this institution designed to send forth. He is disturbed every hour in the day by the cry of want from those around him, and he longs for the money and the power to preach Christ to the 40,000 souls that lie between him and the river. He had outlived churches, and seminaries, and seminaries, &c., and now looked upon every man who bore the image of Christ as his brother, and as possessing the best ordination in the world to preach the Gospel, namely, the experience of the heart. The want of the day is not so much an educated as a converted ministry. He hoped and prayed for the day when rich men would consecrate their wealth to God. It was better to give to do good than to have others take it from them for wicked purposes. And this is what must happen. He was amazed to find the Presbyterian Church in the United States bemoaning the burden of raising $5,000,000 memorial fund, as if its life-blood was to be poured out. It ought to have done it in three weeks. The doctor then announced that while a collection would not be taken up the officers of the House would be glad to receive support from any quarter. The meeting then adjourned.

The officers of the institution are: President, ex-officio, Rev. S. H. Tyng, Jr.; Vice-President, J. M. Brown; Secretary, Rev. JOHN G. Ames; Treasurer, Geo. A. Crocker, (No. 22 Cliff-street); Executive Committee, Rev. S. H. Tyng, Jr., J. M. Brown, A. F. Warburton, C. C. Hastings, and Aden Smith, Jr. The House is located at No. 223 Seventh-avenue, and at its head is placed Rev. Mr. Ames, the Secretary.

I., in addition to previous contributions, amounting to $662 50; and $20 from Kohomo, Ind., collected by a Dane. A letter from Mr. ERNEST BECK, Secretary of the Society of Quakers in London, to M. CHERVET, in this City, announces the receipt of the last remittance of the French Bazaar funds.

HUGO LAUDAN, of No. 206 East Broadway, a porter in the store of WOLFF BROS., at No. 100 Chambers-street, was yesterday arraigned before Justice HOGAN, at the Tombs, on a charge of larceny. The firm have for some time missed small packages of goods. They notified the Police, when a watch was set and led to the detection of LAUDAN in stealing twenty-seven shirts, valued at $40. He was followed, and seen to sell the goods to HENRY HARRIS, of No. 98 Vesey-street, for $15, which led to HARRIS' arrest as a receiver of stolen property. Both of the prisoners were remanded for trial.

Hamilton Lodge, No. 710, Grand United Order of Odd Fellows, celebrated their seventy-seventy anniversary at Shiloh Presbyterian Church last evening. Representatives of five of the different lodges of this City, delegations from Philadelphia, Washington and Albany, and the Past Grand Master's Council, of New-York State, were present. The exercises were of a most pleasant character, and consisted of music by the Shiloh Church choir, and addresses by M. W. P. G. M., WM. C. H. CURRIE; W. C. P. N. F., Rev. R. H. GARNETT; W. C., Rev. M. H. TURPIN, and P. G. M. Rev. JOHN PETERSON.

WM. H. JOHNSON, of No. 145 Baxter-street, colored, called last evening on his washwoman, SARAH LANGLEY, also colored, at her residence, No. 5 Wooster-street, for the purpose of getting a clean shirt, which she refused to give him. A dispute arose ending in an altercation, during which SARAH drew a knife and cut JOHNSON from the top of the forehead down the right side of the nose to the chin, causing a fearful gash. The wounded man was taken to the Wooster-street Police Station, where his wounds were dressed. SARAH is promptly arrested and locked up for examination.

The gallery of Mr. LAURENS, of Baltimore, composed in the main of paintings by American artists, though there were some of the French school, was sold, last night, at SOMERVILLE'S rooms, in Fifth-avenue, and brought fair, but not extravagant prices. "The Campagna," by GIFFORD, brought $210; a small painting, by DURAND, $280; "The Wood-cutter," by E. JOHNSON, the same sum; J. G. BROWN'S "Girl of the Period," $260; and D. HUNTINGTON'S "White Plume," $200.

It has been ascertained that the scalds which caused the death of RICHARD POWERS, at No. 225 East Forty-first-street, were not accidentally sustained, as at first reported. It appears that a man named FRANK BAUER, quarrelled with MARY ANN RUBY, one of the inmates of the house, and seizing the hot teapot threw it at her, thereby scalding the child who happened to be in her arms. BAUER was arrested yesterday afternoon by Officer GRACE of the Twenty-first Precinct, to await the action of the Coroner.

Mr. SETH C. HAWLEY, for the past twelve years the efficient Chief Clerk of the Police Department, has been confined to his house since Friday last by severe illness, the character of which has not yet been definitely determined by his physicians. It was reported to President BOSWORTH yesterday that Mr. HAWLEY had passed a very bad night, but it was not supposed that his condition was critical, and strong hopes were entertained that he would soon be able to resume his duties.

The first of a course of popular lectures by Rev. Dr. DEEMS, entitled "Courtship and Marriage," was delivered last evening, before a large audience, in the Church of the Strangers. The lecturer treated his subject in a lively style, and his lecture was received with much applause. He reminded the boys that they should not wait to get rich before marrying, if they would only be economical and select economical wives. It was possible, he said, to live comfortably and support a wife and baby on $1,200 a year.

Coroner KEENAN decided yesterday not to take immediate action in the case of Mrs. AGNES CLARK, who died at the Dey-street House under peculiar circumstances, as the family have removed the body of the deceased to Newburg, N. Y., for interment, so an inquiry could not be entered into in their absence. It has been ascertained that Mrs. CLARK resided at No. 132 Clinton-street, and that Mrs. Dr. MILLER'S husband is a barber in the Dey-street House.

A fire occurred last evening in the tenement-house, No. 230 Sixth-street, originating on the top floor, occupied by MAURICE SPERO, cigar-maker, extending to the front, occupied by WM. STUBENMEYER. SPERO'S loss is about $50, insured, and STRUBENMEYER'S about $300, not insured. WM. RONERO, in the basement, lost about $50. The building is owned by J. CASANAVAY, whose loss is about $700, insured for $5,000 in the Stuyvesant Insurance Company.

The breaking up of the ice blockade in the Hudson River has given a new impetus to the previous activity of various steam-boat companies. Nearly all the boats, engines, wharves and offices have undergone extensive overhauling, and received many improvements. Although there is considerable ice yet in the river, the boats on several of the short routes have commenced their Spring trips, and navigation will be generally resumed next week.

MICHAEL MALLOY, a native of Ireland, twenty-four years of age, was found at an early hour yesterday by some citizens at the corner of Second-avenue and Thirty-fourth-street, bleeding profusely from a severe cut on the head. He was taken to the Eighteenth Precinct Station-house, where his wound was dressed, after which he was taken to Bellevue Hospital. He refused to state how the injury had been received.

They also addressed the Legislative Railroad Committees, requesting the appointment of a time for an interview.

BROOKLYN.

HENRY CARDOZA and MARY LEVI, both Jews, were united in the bonds of wedlock yesterday morning, by Justice BUCKLEY, in the Second District Police Court. The groom stated that although at present he was too poor to pay for a minister he hoped the Judge would not feel it beneath his dignity to take a drink. His Honor smiled and said he would at some future time.

The wife of Rev. HENRY WARD BEECHER left for Florida yesterday morning, accompanied by her daughter, Mrs. SCOVILL, and other friends. She has been in ill health for some time past, and goes South by the advice of her physician, who thinks the Southern atmosphere may benefit her.

LONG ISLAND.

The Flushing Drainage Commission held a meeting at the Town Hall, Flushing, yesterday afternoon. The Commission explained that in the sparsely settled and farming portions of the town it was their intention to make open drains of but little cost, and they were willing that private parties should, at their own expense, cut these ditches, thereby saving their assessment, when they so desired. These plans, with other less important concessions, seemed to harmonize the conflicting interests, and it is supposed that all further opposition to the Commission will cease.

The Board of Health of Flushing have hired a vacant house in the unpopulated part of the village, which will be fitted up and used as a small-pox hospital. They have also issued orders that the poor can be vaccinated at the expense of the village. The only case which has appeared was brought from Hunter's Point, a child having contracted it there, and its friends brought the child to Flushing, being ignorant of the malady. It is thought that the extreme measure of the Board will stop the further spread of the disease.

The annual meeting of the Flushing Cemetery Association was held yesterday, and the following trustees re-elected: P. A. Van Bergen, Wm. Phillips, Edward Roe, Uriah Mitchell, Geo. R. Roe, Robert B. Parsons, David T. Waterous, Uriah Mitchell, Treasurer; Edward Roe, Secretary. The Association is clear of debt, and has $6,000 in the treasury.

The Supreme Court has appointed the following persons managers of the Newark Soldiers' Home for the ensuing five years: Marcus L. Ward, Daniel Haines, Charles S. Olden, Ryner H. Veghti, Wm. A. Newell and Wm. K. McDonald, three of whom have been Governors. It is thought that the legislative Committee, who visited the institution on Monday, will report in favor of its continuance.

The amount so far contributed in Newark in aid of the suffering French is $2,019 50. At a meeting of the Ward Committees, on Monday evening, the people were accused of dilatoriness and reluctance in subscribing. Collections will be made in all the Roman Catholic Churches in the city on Sunday for the good cause.
